MR. FIRPO, prize fighter from the Argentine, called at the White House and shook hands with President Calvin Coolidge.

The President will be interested to know that the Reverend Canon Chase, of New York, is in Washington, demanding Firpo's deportation.

The story is short. Firpo arrived here with a young woman. Both were taken to Ellis Island. The young woman was deported. Firpo allowed to enter. His fight with Wills will draw a million dollars, and give him a quarter of a million.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE might address the Immigration authorities as follows: "How did you figure it out when the prize fighter and the young woman arrived that SHE was guilty and must be sent away, while he was innocent and might come in? If she was GUILTY, he couldn't be INNOCENT. If he was not guilty, she was innocent.

Send for her, bring her back at government expense, or send him where you sent her!"

Such a message from the President would seem sound to all but the prize fight gentlemen.

IN A SYMPOSIUM, discussing the war, and what the world gained from it, the Kaiser says: "What did the world gain? Nothing. It lost everything."

That is true of the Kaiser, not of the world.

The world learned once more that war is bad for everybody engaged in it. The world gained knowledge in that war, and that's enough to offset the two hundred and fifty billion dollars that the war cost.

JEAN JAURES, Socialist teacher and leader, murdered ten years ago at the beginning of the war, will be buried in the Pantheon with the other great men of France. He deserves that burial, but probably wouldn't have it except for the fact that Herriot, now Prime Minister of France, happens to be a Socialist.

Jaures was a great Frenchman. His address to the school teachers of France, "Teach children to read intelligently and all knowledge is theirs," is one of the best addresses on education.

VALENTINE CHIROL, lecturing for the Institute of Politics at Williams College, warns the West, which means America, and western Europe, that a war with the East is coming.

The insolence of Turkey, crushed, beaten, supposed to be kicked out of Europe, after the armistice, now deliberately hostile, are insulting to all foreigners, should be a warning to us.

TROUBLE with the East will come, but it need not be serious trouble for the United States. Submarines and flying machines, if your government will supply them in sufficient numbers, will take care of this continent. We have an ocean on each side, people to the North and South that will not bother us while we do not bother them. Treat the East fairly, firmly, keeping ourselves able to blow them to pieces if they come here, and if necessary to devastate their home lands in reply to an attack and we need not worry.

MARY A. MAYGINNESS, of Detroit, aged sixty-nine, marries Edward Cochran, twenty-three. The world is amazed; part of it is horrified.

Why should it be horrified?

If a man sixty-nine marries a girl twenty-three nobody is horrified. Yet a very old man marrying a very young woman is worse than a young man marrying an old woman.

Plato, one of the greatest philosophers, believed that old women, with their young children off their hands—assuming, let us hope that their husbands were dead—should look after young women and keep them out of mischief.

THE JEWISH news agency reports that alien Jews are to be expelled from Turkey, with one year's grace. If Kemal Pasha will read the history of Portugal and Spain and learn what happened to the prosperity, trade

GERMAN SUBMARINE LANDS RUM ON CAPE

MAY CALL PLANES TO HUNT SHIP

Federal Agents Here Receive Report of New Type of Booze Runner

United States District Attorney Robert C. Harris today revealed that a huge German commercial submarine is supposed to be landing liquor along Cape Cod.

The report of the German rum ship was received since direct to Washington Attorney Harris. He has turned the matter over to the authorities for investigation. Every effort will be made to run down the report and capture the very latest in the way of rum runners.

According to the information sent to the district attorney the submarine has landed considerable of its cargo at New Bedford and at various other points.

Officials are inclined to credit the report inasmuch as recent reports from New York stated that submarines had been working around the Hudson River.

Officials here believe the submarine reported off Cape Cod may be one of a big fleet of such craft launched into the rum business by a German syndicate.

Aviators discovered the submarines working on the Hudson River. Federal officers in Boston may also resort to the use of planes to run down the submarine smuggler.

Prohibition officials lately have been receiving reports that German beer and French wines have been making their appearance throughout New England.

For some time the Government has maintained a flying station at the tip of the cape. While no appeal has been made as yet to the fliers there, it is felt among officials here that they will probably be called upon for aid if the reports regarding the submarine are found true.

1,000 KLAN GUNMEN ON WAY

Maine and New Hampshire Members Will Be Disarmed by Bay State Troopers

A thousand armed klansmen are coming to Massachusetts from New Hampshire and Maine for the Ku Klux Klan konclave which is to be held in the Merrimac Valley in the vicinity of Boxford or Byfield, Sunday.

They will be disarmed by troopers of the State Patrol, as were the Massachusetts klansmen who met at Shrewsbury in Worcester County last night.

In connection with the plans for their reception, the troopers have been instructed to equip their automobiles with searchlights. These lights will be turned full on the meeting, on the theory that most of the fighting between Klaxers and their foes starts in the darkness.

It is understood that General Alfred F. Bois, Commissioner of Public Safety, has been informed of their coming.

At his office today it was stated that Klan meetings were to be held in Boxford and Swampscott Sunday and they would be policed as thoroughly as the one in Shrewsbury.

Nobody was searched in Shrewsbury, but automobiles were inspected for firearms.

There were no rifles or shotguns in sight according to the commissioner's assistants.

Two Lammen were arrested for carrying arms without permits. They were Robert Olsen and Thomas Sorenson. Olsen lives in Worcester and Sorenson in South Lancaster.

In Worcester District Court today they were held in $100 each for hearing Monday.

Olsen is alleged to have been discovered in possession of two clubs and Sorenson was found to be carrying a rubber hose filled with zinc.

When they were set at liberty they ran up the street, fearing a small crowd which had gathered.

Two policemen followed, as a matter of precaution. But no attempt was made to harm them.

It was rumored that the klansmen were to be mobbed and the Worcester police were mobilized for any emergency.

Although Olsen and Sorenson were the only ones arrested at the big Klan gathering at Shrewsbury, yet five guns, thirty clubs, one blackjack and a large quantity of stones were taken from the Klansmen as they arrived at the Klavern.

It was the first time the order of Governor Cox to remove all weapons from assembled Klansmen and their

LONE AMERICAN FLIER KEEPS ON TO ICELAND

London, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—The American destroyer Reid, stationed midway between the Faroe Islands and Iceland, reported this afternoon that Lieutenant Eric Nelson was passing over, headed for Hornafjord, Iceland.

Kirkwall, Scotland, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—Lieutenant Eric Nelson and his mechanician, Lieutenant John Harding, Jr., in the army airplane New Orleans, were believed here this afternoon to be making a lone attempt to reach Iceland in the American world fliers' flight.

The attempt of Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, the flight commander, to lead the fliers to Hornafjord, Iceland, the first scheduled halt on the trip across the Atlantic, was frustrated by a heavy fog north of the Orkneys.

Lieutenant Smith in the Chicago and Lieutenant Leigh Wade in the Boston, were trapped by the fog when only 60 miles from here, after a late start this morning, and were forced to turn about and return to their base in Houton Bay.

Lieutenant Nelson in the New Orleans became separated from his leader and supposedly took another course out of the trap, continuing his flight to Iceland.

Nelson had more petrol and oil than was necessary to carry him to Iceland, even though he wasted a quantity of it searching for the Berlin, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Hughes, who is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow, will take lunch formally with President Ebert and in the evening will be the guest of honor at a formal dinner to be given by American Ambassador Houghton, at which, it is intended, there will be present Herr Ebert, members of the German government and of the Reichstag and leaders in the industrial and financial life of the nation.

Tribesmen Get but Two Hits Off Him; Genewich Loses Game in the Fifth

Braves Field, Aug. 2.—Pete Donohue held the Braves to five hits and and had no difficulty shutting out the Braves by a score of 2 to 0 in the first game of today's double-header.

Joe Genewich also pitched a good game but the locals could not seem to get any runs for Joe.

The Reds got their two runs in the fifth, when Pinelli and Caveney led off with singles and both runners moved up a base on Hargrave's long fly to Wilson. Donohue's fly to Stengel scored Pinelli and Critz's safe blow to center scored Caveney.

Mayor Curley and his entire family today joined the I PLAY SAFE CLUB. The Mayor called the club, "AN APPEAL TO GOOD CITIZENSHIP," and "A PLEDGE TO LAW AND ORDER."

The Mayor is the second official enrolled. Governor Cox was the first.

Both are active members. They say they are to much interested in the success of the Boston American's campaign to conserve life and limb by reducing automobile casualties, to bother with honorary membership.

They agree that such an organization shouldn't have any honotary members. They say every member should be an ACTIVE member—a living exponent of safety.

Mayor Curley and Governor Cox share the opinion that members of the I PLAY SAFE CLUB should not only "PREACH CAUTION BUT PRACTICE CAUTION."

The I PLAY SAFE CLUB is an organization of live wires, of alert, public-spirited, right-thinking persons of all ages and classes, banded together to awaken the public conscience and to check a real danger.

U. S. ARMY AIRMEN DESCRIBE FLIGHT AROUND THE WORLD

INCIDENTS OF TRIP TOLD

Yankee Officers' Narrative Is Recounted Exclusively for Hearst Papers

By HAYDEN TALBOT.

(Universal Service's staff correspondent, after living with the 'round-the-world fliers for an extended period, today gives Boston American readers the first detailed story of the six great air adventurers, their personalities, their hopes and their work.)

Special Cable to Universal Service. Copyright, 1924, by Universal Service

Kirkwall, Orkney Islands, Aug. 2.—Six American skylarkers finding themselves 7,000 miles from home after flying 18,000 miles, spent a restless day fogbound in Scapa Flow, anxious to get into the air and away to Iceland.

The next hop—Kirkwall to Hornafjord, Iceland, 500 miles—which the fliers had hoped to negotiate early today, was still a misty hour wrapped in mists and low ranging fog making the trip too precarious to be undertaken under the "safety first" program which has been decreed for the balance of the world flight.

BEFORE SUNRISE.

Lieutenant Lowell Smith and his five companions were up before sunrise and began early to receive weather bulletins from American patrol ships over the day's proposed route, from Scotland to Iceland. None of the early reports were favorable and Rear-Admiral Magruder of the Richmond counselled delay.

The following is a fair estimate of each of the six men as he is today:

The first is Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, leader of the flight. He is a enigma. Unfailingly courteous to the point of meticulousness, quiet voiced and almost always sober visaged, this lean, blue-eyed, square-jawed, prematurely old young man is a decided mystery.

Not only because he is the flight leader and as such the obvious source of all authoritative news, but because he is so much more difficult to get to know, I spent probably twice as much time with him as with any of the others. Now at the end of more than a fortnight he remains unfathomed and unfathomable.

SHOWS STRAIN OF TRIP.

It is not that Lieutenant Smith is up stage, nor is he unduly impressed with the importance of his position. It is rather that about him is an aura of great melancholy—at times so nearly definable as to make it seem certain he is suffering from that kind of poignant grief which in itself makes intrusion unthinkable.

In every particular he fulfills the highest ideals of an army officer. But for him all zest for adventure and pride in accomplishment have departed. Almost the first words he spoke to me after landing at Croydon are today more than ever indicative of his real attitude toward the flight. He said:

"It is a thing a man would not have taken a million dollars to miss, and now a million dollars would not tempt me to finish it; if it were a matter of choice."

NO ONE MAN SHOW.

Lieutenant Leigh Wade, pilot of plane 3, is second in seniority to Lieutenant Smith. Of the group Wade is least inclined to "skylark" and treat life as a joke, but he is still very much a boy. Incidentally Wade is perhaps more than any of the others grimly determined to finish the flight triumphantly.

"This is not a one man show, you know," he said to me one night, and in his tone and the expression of his boyish eyes there was much more significance than the mere words betokened.

"Whatever anybody else may or may not do, I am going to deliver my ship back to the Douglas people at Santa Monica where I got it."

Wade is the doubtest of the sextette with the ladies. It is betraying no confidence to divulge what is an open secret to all who visited his room at the sleeping quarters, that his bureau is literally heaped with photographs elaborately inscribed by scores of beautiful, ardent admirers of his among the fair sex. As to his own taste in these matters his description of Tokio and Shanghai is illuminating. He said:

"They are great towns, both of them, and, oh, how different those Geisha girls are from the ladies of Shanghai."

Wade has ambitions as a writer, rambling to me:

"Of course the chief thing a man has to have to be a good writer is imagination. I admit that I haven't much imagination left after 18,000 miles of this flight, but once I am through and can get back to real life I have an idea that I can produce some imagination, all right."

FINE TYPE OF MANHOOD.

Lieut. Erick Nelson pilot of Plane 4, is third in seniority to Lieut. Smith. Nelson is very quickly after you meet him—and of all the scientific men is a fine specimen of manhood. They the six foot, Swedish born, naturalized American.

The only American woman who visited the airmen during their stay at Brough and spent the entire day with them, had this to say on leaving:

"They are all wonderful boys and it should mak easy American proud to know them, but if I had to make a trip by air I would prefer to have Nelson pilot the machine."

Nelson began his flying career in 1912 as a civilian pilot under Glen Curtiss and entered the army aviation service when America entered the war.

"The Curtiss engine," he said, "is lighter and more powerful than the Liberty motor, but it has never been produced in sufficient numbers or been used enough to give it the tests the Liberty has had. We know all there is to know about the Liberty motor, and so it had been perfected to the last degree. But it is not the last word in engines by a long way, as the near future will prove.

"In fixing the reliability of the motor is all important and a really reliable engine is yet to be designed."

When I acquainted Nelson with the criticism he grinned broadly. He said:

"Why, the foxy son of a gun," he said. "Here he has been telling us how hard he has been working since the British government that welded joints are far superior to their own.

"Well, we have been sitting in his hangar with three planes that have traveled farther than any planes have ever gone before and they are as good as new. It is too bad if they are not good enough to pass an examination in this country. They are good enough to take us around the world, so I guess we can stand it."

NELSON WADE'S MENTOR.

Nelson is Lieutenant Wade's mentor. To Nelson Wade comes with all his difficulties and Nelson gives advice modestly, unreservedly and authoritatively. Modesty is a passion with him. Just before leaving Brough I saw him sign an autograph album as "Offer on Number Four."

The fourth man is Lieutenant Leslie Arnold, the observer in Lieutenant Smith's plane. Here is the comedian of the sextette. If "Les" cannot find something funny in any given situation it must be tragic. As a worker, he is the kind that never hears the closing whistle. His stamina and courage have been fully tested but none of these qualities can give an accurate picture of this stout-hearted, heavily muscled young mariner.

With the agility and mischievousness of a monkey, Arnold's greatest delight is to spring jokes on the rest of the party. He is not only a fine type of upstanding American youth, but he has a sense of humor that must have been and will continue to be invaluable to those hardworked, nerve wracked adventurers.

The fifth man is Staff Sergeant H. H. Ogden, observer in Lieutenant Wade's plane. According to Arnold, "We have two foreigners with us—Nelson, the Swede, and Ogden from Mississippi."

Hearst Writer Follows Fliers Around World

THE first of a series of stories on the experiences of the American world fliers from the time they left Santa Monica, California, by Hayden Talbot, Universal Service Staff Correspondent, appears herewith.

Since the arrival of the fliers in England on July 15 Talbot has been continuously with them gathering material for these comprehensive articles on the whole flight.

Talbot went with them from Croyden to Brough and when they hopped off for Kirkwall Wednesday followed them to the Orkney Islands in the hope of being there to meet them on their arrival. He did get there almost as soon as they did and his Wednesday's report from Scapa Flow practically begins the chronicles of the fliers' first 18,000 miles.

The present dispatch from Brough is the first of his intimate studies and detailed relations of the adventurous fliers as secured from them at first hand.

OFF TO ICELAND

colleagues. He was under orders to continue the flight under such conditions unless his commander signalled otherwise.

AIRPLANE IS HEARD.

A wireless message from the Cruiser Richmond relayed a message from the American destroyer stationed off the Faroes reporting the passage of Lieutenant Nelson in the New Orleans over the Faroes bearing for Iceland at 12:50 o'clock this afternoon. A dispatch from Thorshaven in the Faroes reported an airplane passing over one of the Islands of the group about the same hour, the sound of the motor being heard although the machine could not be seen because of the fog.

Some uncertainty as to Nelson's movements was created by a dispatch saying Lieutenant Nelson was returning to Kirkwall.

Destroyer Escort Off Labrador

On Board the U. S. S. Barry, Aug 2 (By Wireless to the A.P.)—The destroyer division on the way to Labrador to patrol the waters as far as Greenland for the American round-the-world fliers, passed through Belle Isle Straits today and will be at Indian Harbor tomorrow.

Hub Airport Being Cleared for Fliers

Arrangements are being made at the Boston airport to accommodate the crowd expected to attend the landing of the world fliers. Parking spaces are being laid out for thousands of automobiles and the field will be roped off around the place where the fliers will land.

At the request of Lieutenant Lowell Smith, in command of the American round-the-world fliers, the program of entertainment planned for their arrival in Boston has been cancelled and only an informal greeting by State and city officials, heads of the army and navy and air forces, and a representative of the Secretary of War will be given, it was announced by General A. W. Brewster, commanding the New England Army Area.

BOYS MENTALLY ILL, DECLARES ALIENIST

Chicago, Aug. 2 (I.N.S.).—Nathan Leopold, Jr., expects to hang for his part in the slaying of Robert Franks.

This fact was made known today through a letter written by the slayer from his cell.

"You may be interested to know" runs the letter "that in the event that I am sentenced to death upon the gallows (as appears quite likely) I shall take steps to attempt to pierce the veil although I personally am convinced that no after life exists. I at least, will be prepared for the exigency in case I be mistaken."

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Both Nathan F. Leopold and Richard A. Loeb were "intellectually capable" of choosing between right and wrong on the day they kidnaped little Bobby Franks, bashed his head with a chisel and hid his body in an isolated culvert, but "morally they had no feeling attitude about it."

This conclusion was drawn from Dr. William A. White, one of the alienists retained by the boys' wealthy families today, on cross-examination by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

That was so far as Crowe could get in casting legal "responsibility" on the young slayers by their own alienists.

Time and again, in a dozen different ways, the State's attorney tried to get a flat statement from Dr. White as to whether Leopold and Loeb were sane or insane within the meaning of the law, but every time the words "legal insanity" or "sane or insane" crept into the questions, attorneys for the defense raised objections and always the court upheld them.

"MENTALLY SICK."

"Mentally sick" was the psychiatrist's declaration of both young slayers, but whether that sickness reached the point of insanity was a matter which Dr. White was forbidden to speak about.

"Did Loeb know on May 21 that it was wrong to kill Robert Franks?" asked Crowe.

"Did he know it was against the law," asked Crowe.

"Did he know it was morally wrong?"

"He could not distinguish exactly."

"Is he legally insane?"

Objection by the defense was sustained.

The cross-examination proceeded with constant bickering between the witness and the State's attorney. They fought over terms and shades of meaning and definitions of such words as "responsibility."

SHARP WRANGLES.

Crowe insisted on straight "yes" or "no" answers to many of his questions, all designed to show that the young collegians are sane and responsible for the crimes.

But Dr. White refused to give them in almost every instance and they had sharp wrangles over it. Judge Caverly finally ruled that the alienist could answer the questions in his own way.

Crowe lost no time in going after Dr. White when today's session opened.

"You say Loeb considered killing members of his family. Your only authority for that is Loeb himself, isn't it?"

"Yes."

Crowe asked the doctor if he didn't think it significant that Loeb should not have mentioned this in his detailed confession and White said he did not. It was Crowe's purpose to show that by the time Dr. White came in contact with the boys they both had begun to "talk for the record."

CAN'T SPLIT MAN.

Dr. White admitted there existed no standard tests by which the emotional side of a person could be gauged accurately. He said his estimate of Loeb as from three to five years of age emotionally, even though of very high grade intellectually, was only "opinion based on experience."

"Which side carried out this murder, the emotional or the intellectual?" asked Crowe.

"You can't split a man up that way."

"Well, could the intellect at any time have stopped the emotional being from committing it?"

"I don't know."

Crowe brought out that even though Loeb was emotionally five years old he had consideration enough to request the state's attorney not to mention the names of "secret girls," friendly to him and that he asked the State's attorney not to make public the name of Julius Rosenwald, his father's partner, whose little grandson had been an intended victim. Loeb said it might get his father in bad with Rosenwald.

"Does that indicate the emotion of a five-year-old or a grown man?" asked Crowe.

"It might indicate either. It shows more affection for his father than anything else."

"Please explain how such an emotional infant as you have described could appear so normal in all other contacts—in his university work," directed Crowe.

"The emotional infant," replied White, "is only visible to the trained eye. Friends, relatives and those who surrounded these boys could not see it. Trained eyes could."

Crowe asked the psychiatrist to explain his theory of responsibility under the law.

LEGAL FICTION.

"My own opinion of responsibility is that it is legal fiction—pinned on a defendant for the purpose of justifying a verdict. I think it is archaic."

"Then you don't agree with the law?"

"I don't agree with the law in many respects in my work."

Crowe asked whether Loeb had the inherent will to choose between committing the crime and not committing it.

"I think the forces within him seriously impaired his capacity to choose between doing it and not doing it."

1,000 GUNMEN OF KLAN TO COME HERE

State Troopers Ready to Disarm Maine and New Hampshire Men at Meeting

State police under Captain George A. Parker and policemen from all the surrounding towns patrolled the roads leading to the Klan meeting.

As each car drew up at the field the occupants were promptly searched. The Klansmen apparently went to the meeting prepared for trouble. The hundreds of members who gathered at the Harvey farm, a mile from the centre of the town were rough clothing.

FRUSTRATED RIOTS.

About the vicinity gathered hundreds of anti-Klansmen. The cars bearing these men were also searched and weapons removed. Had the order not been placed in effect serious rioting with attendant loss of life would have resulted. It is believed.

The State police patrolled every street in Shrewsbury and the main highway from Marlboro to Worcester. State detectives in charge of State Officer Sherlock assisted in patrolling the thoroughfares and the fields about the meeting place.

Anti-Klansmen were kept on the move. They were not permitted to stop their cars near the scene of the Klan gathering. In addition to the police on guard outside the Klan meeting place the organization itself had a double line of guards about the field.

MINUTER PRAYS.

The password to the meeting was "American Soldier," but the password alone was not sufficient to gain admittance to the field. A minister who opened the Klan meeting with prayer was one of the principal speakers.

It was when the meeting broke up after midnight that the real trouble was feared. The State officers and Worcester policemen on motorcycles acted as an escort to the Klan cars moving from the meeting place.

Despite these precautions a number of cars containing anti-Klansmen followed some of the members of the order. At one time the motorcycle officers dispersed a crowd of 200 men and boys who had gathered in the centre of the town, apparently bent on attacking the Klansmen.

TO MEET IN KEENE.

Shrewsbury's Klan meeting was not attended with any disorders, yet the officers realized that serious trouble was possible and the strictest vigilance was not relaxed until the last of the Klansmen was miles away from the scene of the meeting. Among the Klansmen attending the meeting the word was spread that there would be a gathering of the Klan at Keene, N. H., on August 6, and that Klansmen from all parts of New England would attend.

The Klansmen were told that they should be ready to protect themselves at this meeting as the leaders of the order fear trouble.

Ripping Hood of Secrecy From the Ku Klux Klan

WHY does a Ku Kluxer put his hood on rear end first?

Why does he make all the signs but the danger sign with his left hand?

What are the Klan signs?

Why can he look you in the eye and swear he is not a Klansman when you know him to be a member of the local Klavern?

Can a foreign-born Protestant join now? Or ever?

How many Kluxers in New England?

Those are some of the questions the Boston American will answer in a series of articles starting Tuesday. These articles were written by an ex-kleagle of the order. The idea behind them is absolutely new. It is not primarily to expose Klan policies and principles, but Klan methods, Klan oddities, Klan symbols, Klan ritual, Klan absurdities.

Massachusetts is being organized for the Ku Klux Klan.

These articles—which constitute an ex-kleagle's intimate and truthful story of his connection with the K. K. K.—are timely.

RICH AMERICANS STARTLE DEAUVILLE BY DARING ESCAPADES

WIVES OF $3 SEEK DIVORCE

Men Figure in Thefts, Kidnaping and Heavy Losses at Gambling

(Copyright, 1924, by Universal service)

Deauville, Aug. 2.—Racing, gambling, bathing beauties and unlimited cocktails have not made Deauville so lively that certain of the American younger set cannot make it livelier.

The Deauville police have been quite frankly anxious to discover the identity of eight American and two South American gentlemen who have been, it is declared, responsible for antics which pass the frontier of whatever this hectic Normandy resort considers decorum.

Here is a summary of what these irresponsibles are charged with:

1.—They stole all the bicycles of the police commissionaires they could find and rode them to the beach where they left them. The tide came in and the bicycles were ruined.

2.—They went in bathing before a highly interested audience of society debutantes without troubling to first put on bathing suits.

3.—They changed all the shoes placed by guests at the Normandy Hotel outside their rooms for cleaning, hiding some of them under the beds of otherwise attached ladies.

4.—They broke one of the very expensive windows in the Baccarat rooms of the Casino by hurling some of the purloined footwear through it. One of the shoes alighted on the bridge of Andre Citroen's nose and nearly broke it, just as Andre was going "banco" for a quarter of a million francs.

KIDNAP WAITER.

5.—Finally, they kidnapped the currency staid and portly Pierre, headwaiter at the Casino, stripped his clothes off and imprisoned him in a lonely shack on the beach while the distracted Cornuche rushed hither and thither hunting his invaluable assistant. During this operation the whole organization of the famous restaurant went to pieces.

Complaints from guests showered in to Cournuche, but the latter has hesitated to make complaints to the authorities. One of the Americans is the husband of a prominent Philadelphia bride who has just left the baccarat table since she arrived here, losing steadily. Another is a younger son of a famous Indiana family, very handsome, dark and under twenty. He, too, is a good customer, very young, of the descendant tables, his proxy being a fascinating American actress, who was formerly the fiancee of Maurice, the dancer.

ALL WEALTHY.

Still another is a much-married Broadway light, whose present wife is now in Paris and reported to be suing for divorce. This marchio lost nearly a million at the tables.

The fourth and fifth members of the American party are sons of prominent New York families, all rolling in wealth.

So "Crap" Cornuche's brow became creased with worry as he waited and watched. But when the wild ones finally returned, weary and his faithful headwaiter nearly caught pneumonia from exposure, Cornuche summoned his twenty famous Deauville bouncers and surrounded the culprits.

"You have the option of leaving immediately or going to jail," he declared. "You have cost me serious losses. I have had to pay for a dozen pair of shoes besides the broken windows. If I tell the police about that bathing party you will all land in a French prison, millionaires or not."

Explosulations, denials and indignation were of no use. The Czar was adamantic.

So the ten hopped into their high powered racing cars and a couple of hours later were recounting their adventures in the night cafes of Montmartre, while at least three wives concerned are talking of getting divorces.

DISABLED STEAMER LIMPING INTO PORT

Manila, Aug. 2. (A.P.)—The freight steamer Stanley, whose engines broke down off the Island of Palawan, is proceeding to Ilo Ilo under her own power, said a wireless message here today.

WHICH OF THESE DOES HE LOVE?

MRS. STANLEY W. TANNFIELD

WIFE DOESN'T THINK POLLY DAY RIVAL

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Is Polly Day of New York's Music Box Revue, a rival for the heart of the magnetic Stanley W. Tannfield, financier of London?

Not so, says Stan's wife, the little brown-eyed thrush of a woman who was married to him nine years ago—years before he began meeting Polly Day or any other woman from Broadway.

Gayls Burlingame, Eastern theatrical manager, wants $100,000 from Tannfield. Burlingame is Polly's husband. He says that Polly's charms, which, he alleges, Tannfield pilfered, are worth that much to him.

HUSBAND DEFENDED.

Mrs. Tannfield, here in her apartment, defended Tannfield today against these charges and also said a word or so about her own ability to hold the errant heart of man.

Waving a sculptural arm in a plea for understanding, she declared:

"They say Stan is an errant husband? Ridiculous! We're as much in love today as we were when we were married. Stan is simply the victim of his own winning personality. You understand, don't you?

"He is very impulsive and magnetic, and this Polly Day of Broadway is very beautiful, so Mr. Burlingame invents this scheme, with her in the role of the deserted wife.

"How do I fit the part?"

AMUSED AT IDEA.

Her eyes danced with merriment at the idea. She continued:

"You know, long ago Stan and I decided that neither should ever interfere with the other in the matter of living their own life. If I should meet some one in New York or elsewhere that I loved more than I do Stan, I would tell him frankly and there would be a divorce. Or, should he fall in love with some other girl, I would release him.

"Don't you see, there's no use trying to hold someone who wants to go. But Stan doesn't want to go. There's no New York actress, or any other woman on Broadway or off, that he cares for, except me.

DENIES PHONE TALK.

"The statement credited to me about telephoning Mr. Burlingame to keep his wife away from my husband because I wanted to keep him straight, has no foundation.

"I don't believe in that sort of thing, do you? I don't think it's possible. But I do know my husband loves me more than any other woman and that he never has been unfaithful to me.

"On account of our baby's health, I was obliged to leave England. Physicians believed this climate would agree with him, and that is my reason for being here. My husband's business prevented him from accompanying us."

NEW PEACE PLAN ACCEPTED BY SHOE UNION

The Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America, through vote of a majority of its locals, has accepted the new peace agreement, effective until April 30, 1925, from the date it is signed by union and firm representatives.

The manufacturers will presumably act favorably by the middle of the coming week, as they have previously made known that they favored it.

The agreement forbids strikes, lockouts or concerted cessations of work. It is an advantage to the manufacturers over the old agreement in replacing, because it allows a five and a half day week nine months of the year and abolishes the five-day week except in June, July and August.

Saturday morning work is permitted slipper manufacturers during those three months, provided time worked is allowed operatives during the remaining nine months of the year.

ULSTER'S PLAN REJECTED BY ENGLAND

Refuses Proposal That Proposed Boundary Commission's Power Be Limited

London, Aug. 2 (I.N.S.)—The British government today rejected Ulster's proposals that the functions of the proposed commission to settle the Ulster-Free State boundary dispute be limited.

President William T. Cosgrave of the Dublin government, is insistent that the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty creating the Free State be carried out in full. Members of the London government concurred.

President Cosgrave conferred at length with colonial Secretary J. H. Thomas, in an effort to arrange immediate parliamentary legislation to enable order settlement, assuming the Dublin government does a grave crisis unless there is action at once.

Lord Londonderry and other members of the Ulster government, representing Premier Sir James Craig, said Ulster could not give in, and would oppose the detachment of any territory from Ulster province to be added to the Free State.

St. John's, N. F., Aug. 2.—Telegrams exchanged between Premier Monroe and Alfred Prince, head of the committee of strikers on the construction work of the Humbermouth Paper & Power plant at Corner Brook on the west coast of Newfoundland, were made public today, showing the belligerent attitude of the strikers who seek a 10 per cent wage increase. Prince's first telegram read:

"Want you at once. Three thousand men will board at government or company expense. If train comes and you not there will be sent back and demand you. I know exactly what will not cross island till you come."

To this the Premier replied:

"To best interest of all concerned urgently suggest call off strike for present giving government time to close the house and investigate the whole situation at Cornerbrook. Personally desirous of strike every resistance possible."

Prince wired back:

"Four thousand men demand your presence at Cornerbrook at once. If not, plant and forest will be laid in ruins. Every hour demands free meals after tomorrow at government or company expense."

Premier Monroe then telegraphed Prince that to save fo his second message he would have no further communication with him.

ACTRESS SEES DIVORCE AS FUTILE

Elsie Bartlett Loves Schildkraut Despite His Tight Purse String

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Divorce—all—Elsie Bartlett, the actress, says, is futile and will not be captured the "phil anopliy of a married woman." She declared divorce is futile.

Miss Bartlett discussed a rumor that she would divorce Joseph Schildkraut, the actor. He reached here from New York and a last report said there would be no di vorce.

"I'm going to stay here until she returns to New York with me," says she way Mr. Schildkraut an swered when asked if his wife intended on going through with a divorce. And Miss Bartlett's faith in divorce as a highway to happiness appeared shaken.

UNABLE TO FORGET.

"Divorce is so futile," she said. "It's so useless. A woman can no more forget the man to whom she's been married, than she can forget to breathe. When a girl marries she abandons everything for her husband. He is the only thing she has to cling to, and if she ever divorces him, she is left adrift, anchorless, rudderless."

There is no real escape from the man you have married, Miss Bartlett believes. She continues: "After all, men are much alike. There is no variety in them. You marry—it's a bargain! You might as well stick to it.

"Woman is so constituted that she wants to belong to the man she loves. She may be absolutely certain that they'll never be happy married. She may know hell bent her, or mistreat her like a witless infant.

SCHILDKRAUT JEALOUS.

"I married Joseph Schildkraut, I love him. I know he loves me, but well, we'll never be happy together. He is jealous of my professional position. He resents the fact that I am which to lavish pretty things, not as a woman who has personal needs who occasionally must have money. I can't settle down and be domestic. I must be self-supporting. My nickels and dimes go so fast. And Joseph's motto is 'Thousand for an ermine coat, but not a cent to wifey for spending money.'

"A married woman is like a crook —there is no going back for either of them."

SLOGAN WINNER TO BE NAMED MONDAY

New England Business Boosters Keep Advertising Experts Working Overtime

In the slogan contest for New England Week, the choice of a prize-winning phrase, which shall be used to boost New England made goods, has narrowed down to three.

The committee expects to announce a winner next Monday, but up to the present has been deadlocked on a trio of slogans which they regard as exceptionally good. What these slogans are they will not divulge until the winning phrase is chosen.

The winner of the contest will receive $100, and the next ten will receive honorable mention.

More than 2,000 slogans have been received by the committee, showing the widespread interest already taken in New England Week throughout the six states that comprise the section.

About 50 per cent. of the slogans were sent in by women. Included some of the best submitted. A large number of children also entered phrases, which, in their opinion, will help build up industry and increase business.

The judges who are now hard at work trying to determine which is the three slogans already chosen is best, are L. F. Hamilton, J. S. Wychert, Henry Kuhns and H. Barkley, all experts in advertising.

Sargent, No. 57 Green street, Reading; "Buying New England is selling New England," Lewis H. Bailey, No. 204 Homer street, Newton Centre.

Williamstown, Aug. 2.—The British protest against the alteration of the elevation of guns on capital ships of the United States has no foundation to rest upon, according to Rear Admiral W. L. Rodgers, retired, who is here as a member of the Institute of Politics.

"In my opinion," he said, "no justification exists for the protest. We need only to stand on our rights and England will scarcely continue to insist upon a point on which our judgment is just as authoritative as her own."

SEQUEL OF CHICKIE

By Elenore Meherin

Intriguing and Refreshingly Blunt Story of the Soul-Racking Troubles Love Brought to Pretty Boston Girl

HE came the next day. He sat in an arm chair, reading. He came out every few moments with an enthusiastic: "Listen to this, Miss Bryce."

Her reserve made no impression.

"I have tickets for the theatre, Miss Bryce. Now, you've been sitting frightfully enough, haven't you? Will you come?"

"No—thank you—I have other engagements."

He smiled. "Always, Miss Bryce?"

"Yes—"

He leaned down, his fingers creeping over here. "Don't we understand each other, Miss Bryce?"

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing at all! Don't you understand that I crave your company?"

She stood up her eyes on a level with his. "Do you think, Mr. Lamarck, that I would accept attentions when I don't wish them?"

He shrugged in an easy whimsical fashion: "Why shouldn't you wish attention? A young girl—and a stranger here—a beautiful young girl—" His smile was full of admiring softness: "What are you to do with your evenings?"

"I was explaining to Edward—"

He came over and clasped both her arms: "How foolish you talk, Miss Bryce! Why should you bury yourself? I should like to know!"

She let his hands remain on her arms. But she stood very erect and stiff. She said quietly: "Do you know about me? Did you hear that tale? I should like to know?"

The Show-Down

Lamarck raised his brows. They were shiny, and pencilled—very black against the cathy olive skin. The gesture and the smile were a smooth dismissal of all unpleasant things. "Know of you, my dear Miss Bryce—just what, for example? That you are an extravagantly sweet young lady, though somewhat peppery—"

"I want to know, Mr. Lamarck. If Edith Potter told you?" Asking this, Chickie's face stained crimson. She was suddenly humiliated and ashamed. Her eyes lowered swiftly, but not before they had seen a satisfied look in his.

"What tale now is Edith recounting? Or what greatness is yours that I should hear of it?"

She turned from him with a disheartened weariness — convinced now. He followed, hunting over her shoulder. "Why speak of it, Miss Bryce? I assure you I am by no means American in that particular. A little past, more or less—"

Again his brows raised. The look and the tone went through her with a withering shame that she could have sobbed. She could have covered her face, for it was as though she stood there naked and senseless. And there was something brutal about it—that Luis Lamarck should see her so.

Made No Difference

"Do you suppose it makes any difference to me, Miss Bryce? Do you count me another Lee Wilman? Why—what are a few yesterdays in the life of a pretty girl?"

Talking freely like that of this thing that had broken her to the soul; that had been the innermost of her heart made her feel stripped and profaned. She said pathetically: "Why should I have to speak of it to you?"

"You don't? Did mention it? Did I bring it up—"

"It was in your thoughts. It is in them now. Because of it you presume to insult me. I must accept your attentions. You are wasting your time."

"Why, my little dear—you do me a great wrong. I only want you to know that it makes no difference in my regard. I think we can arrange to be the very best of friends."

She went over to the cabinet in the corner where she kept her hat. She made no answer for she felt as one whose hands are tied and whoever would might come up and strike her in the face. It seemed so then.

Weeth he saw her putting on her hat, he smiled serenely: "You know you don't need to be alone here. We are not all like young Wilman. Don't let that weigh on you. Do we understand each other now, Miss Bryce?"

She adjusted her hat, a rawness and a heat spreading to her throat. She forced herself to meet his glance, measured him steadily: "Yes—Mr. Lamarck! We do."

He gave her a slow, beaming smile. "If I'm not here when you return—"

"I'm finished for the day!"

"What! At 3 o'clock? Mon dieu! I led you into a lady's job didn't I?"

Walked To Door

She walked uncertainly to the door, her head very high, her hands fumbling at the lock. She didn't bid him goodby.

Lamarck's eyes followed with cynical amusement. He raised the lapel of his coat and sniffed the tiny rose.

Chickie walked down the street heedless of the warm crowds, the strident machines. It seemed to her that she hurried through an abyss. It was walled on either side with men. Half of them turned from her because of a thing she had done, the other half pursued because she was to them a legitimate victim. She had given proof of weakness once. She would give it again. Since honey is to be spilled, why not be the one to gather it?

Pitiless attitude, and common enough—the vulture circling while a thing lies dying. Shut away the air, be the one to pounce—what if its own wings soil with blood?

Ho—Luis Lamarck knew! But that was all right—Sweet little girl—he wouldn't mind.

On the back at the boarding house was a letter from Mary. It was the first in a week. Mary was usually very prompt. Chickie knew that she would let the dishes go—that she sat down always the very moment and answered. So she had written to Martha Blake wondering at Mary's silence.

"I was explaining to Edward just now. Mary had a daughter. No, she hadn't spoken of it—wanted it to be a surprise. Chickie's eyes filled. She understood clearly enough. Mary was afraid to mention it—afraid to lash up memories. As though they were ever buried!

Mary said only, "She's cute, Chickie, but Edward is very jealous. I don't know just how I should act about it. Now that I have to stay home so much, I keep wishing you were here and thinking of you.

"Jennie called yesterday. We talked and talked. She seemed just full to the lips with so many things she longed to say. She was making boudoir pillows because she saw a picture of a young girl's room in a magazine. They had was filled with the pillows. She said to me: 'Will Chickie like them?' as though you were coming home tomorrow

Feels Desolate.

"Then Jonathan called for her. And I don't know, Chickie, but it made me feel desolate the way he took her hand and they went out together as forlorn and lost as two blind people.

"I am hurting you—of coure. But lying here in bed I am pretending to be you and figuring out how I would act. I wouldn't stay away, any longer because this is only an evasion. You should say something in your letter to mother that makes me sure of this. And youre only avoiding life by this absence. We can't do this—none of us.

"Chickie, old thing—I haven't a bit of pep. Mother wants to add a line——"

In Marthas clear, virile hand was this:

"My Dear Girl, Chickie:

"You say that you live in fear of meeting someone who knows; someone who will flash everything upon you? Has this already happened? Whether it has or not you must meet it. And you must not fear it; you must not bow. This is not contrition; it is cowardice. We give power to evil when we allow it to beat us down.

"Dont you know, Chickie, that remorse is the devil's most cruel weapon against his God? With it, he sharpens to panic the cry of despair—the cry one given and sinks—

Walk Bravely

"And we are not to bear this from you, dear girl. You can not let the world say what your life is going to be. Let the world have any opinion of you it will—you must be dear to it. There's only one idea of you that counts. That's your own idea of yourself. You must walk bravely in your own thought. You know what you are. Be that so calmly, with such persistent faith, that the talk of you will falter and grow dumb before the serene, conflicting presence of you.

"Of course you will meet rebuffs—perhaps you are meeting them—and you are not telling us who love you. That is good. But you can't spend your life waiting for these blows. The victorious way is to come out and challenge them. It is a hard way, but you are on a hard road, Chickie, dear, no matter which fork of it you take.

"Because of all this, I wonder do you think of coming home, of meeting the issue face to face?

"Our love and faith is yours, whatever decision you make.

"Your old friend, Martha."

Chickie read it and read it. Come home and meet the issue face to face! Ho—Martha must think she was talking to her own daughter; to Mary, who said when you love you suffer; you are glad to suffer, for you want to serve and serve!

Yet, as she pondered she suddenly had an images of herself challenging Luis Lamarck; asking him that brazen question: "Do you know of me?" Asking it because a piercing intuition let her know that it was the only thing to do. She would, in the end, be equal to the future only when she became superior to the past and its memories.

Cruel To Tell Her

But go home now? Well, it was cruel of them to tell her that about Jennie and Jonathan. Two old blind ones—forlorn . . .

She fancied Jennie in her garden, stooping down over her roses . . . then the two of them eating in the kitchen. Jonathan coming in with bluff gossip. So-and-so was painting his house! High time unless he wanted the shack to fall to pieces. After that silence—watching their plates, afraid of the pain hiding in each other's eyes.

She would go home to them—walk up the block where arm and arm she and Mary had whispered and wondered, the very breeze alive with mystery and music—

Would it be so hard? Harder than here with the loneliness eating like a ravenous beast at her heart. With men like Luis Lamarck finding her out, carving with gentle insinuation: "I think we can arrange to be the very best of friends"—

What did he mean by that? Oh—perhaps no evil at all—perhaps she was hypersensitive.

Yet on her arms she felt now the caressing movement of his hands. She began to walk about the room.

Her alarm suddenly all alert. Would Luis come in again? Had she convinced him? Must she permit his presence? What had he to do with Edgeman?

She stopped abruptly, saying to herself: "If he comes—I'll quit..."

Pursuit

At noon the next day, Chickie searched for a gift for Mary's baby. Through her thoughts were a singing—singing of mournful voices. They filled her ears with echoes. And these dropped softly, like the first rain of winter on her head.

She looked in a jeweler's window. A little ring or a set of pins, perhaps. Then she saw on a delicate chain seven small, glimmering pearls and fancied them resting on a baby's neck.

Mary would like that—it would be a wondrous token. Not on Mary's child but on her own Chickie's. She bought the pearls. Little still thing lying on a table and she had gone up and touched its lips, pressed her cheek against it, crying because its life went out in such a cold and lonely way; like a thing that no one wanted; like a thing that no one loved. She wished that she had given it some costly, beautiful thing like these pearls.

She went in and bought them. Mary would be in tears of excitement. Chickie wished to write a warm, bright note—yet she paused long while over a sentence; "Mary darling: You though, your boy could give me such as you didn't speak of it? But I am glad you have a little girl——"

To be continued Monday.

MARTHA LEE BY RADIO

By MARTHA LEE.
Broadcast From Station WNAC, for WNAC American Woman's Club.

ALL of our WNAC American Women's Club members want to be thoroughly up-to-date on all food subjects I know, so I'm sure you'll all be interested in the discovery that has been made by Dr. Phillip H. Hawk, formerly of the faculty of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. Hitherto, milk fat (or butter) has been given first place as the source of vitamines, those elements whose function in food is to promote animal growth.

As the result of feeding experiments at the Food Research Laboratory of Powder Point School at Duxbury, Mass., Dr. Hawk now reports that another widely used article of food, vegetable margarine, may register as high a vitamin content as the best creamery butter.

Of Unequal Value

After emphasizing the great importance of vitamins in diet Dr. Hawk's report continues:

"As a matter of fact, however, all butters are not of equal value from the standpoint of their vitamin content. Not only do different butters vary greatly in the amount of that vitamin which they carry but occasionally a butter is found which is very difficient in its vitamine content. The vitamin value of butter is apparently influenced by the feed eaten by the cow as well as by the season of the year, the age of the animal, etc.

"Not so very long ago, I had occasion to compare the relative food value of butter and a representative vegetable margarine. In this investigation we took animal and fed them these fats. When the tests were completed, it was found that the vegetable margarine was just as digestible as butter, and had as high an energy value. In other words, it was equally as satisfactory a food from the above viewpoints as was butter. Such a margarine is also a highly economical medium to supply the energy-producing fat which we all need, as well as the vitamines that we know are absolutely indispensable to the diet.

Economize Without Worry

Many people who have hesitated to use the vegetable margarines as freely as they wished, fearing that they were deficient in these necessary food elements, can now economize in this direction without a worry. In cake and pastry making, for deep fat frying, as a spread on bread or crackers in fact in any way in which butter is used, vegetables margarines may be substituted as freely as you wish.

Of course there is no claim that the cow will be superseded by the cocoanut in the "Who's Who" of diet. Milk always has been and very probably always will be the best food for man's general use, but Dr. Hawk has certainly demonstrated that those who, for reasons of taste or economy, prefer vegetable margarine to butter can obtain their preference without fear of any nutritional deficiency.

ORANGE LAYER CAKE

Cream 1 cup sugar with ½ cup of vegetable margarine; add 1 egg slightly beaten and 1 tbsp. water taken from the ½ cup water which is needed for the whole recipe. Beat 1 minute with egg-beater. Then sift together, 1½ cups pastry flour, ½ tsp. salt, and 2 tsps. baking powder. Add grated rind of 1 orange. Add orange juice to rest of water and add to sugar and eggs alternately with dry ingredients. Cut and fold in beaten whites of eggs.

ORANGE FILLING

Mix together ½ cup sugar, 3 tbsps. cornstarch, ¼ tsp. salt, and ¼ tbsp. bread flour. Add 1 tbsp. margarine and ¾ cup water and cook 15 minutes in a double boiler, after the mixture thickens. Beat 1 egg slightly and add to mixture. Then add the grated rind of 1 orange with juice and 1 tbsp. lemon juice. When cold spread between layers. Use plain white frosting on top.

CARE OF COMPLEXION

By Maria Jeritza.
Famous Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

IT is surprising how many women write for advice regarding complexion troubles, with the idea that there is a magic formula, could they but find it, which will create matchless loveliness.

That the condition of the skin is merely a symtom of the general health and cleanliness of the body internally and externally, does not occur to them.

Do you realize that many of the most exquisite complexions in this world belong to women who never use cold creams and have never even heard of beauty specialists?

Watch the incoming immigrant women arrive from Ellis Island. You will marvel at their clear coloring, smooth, fine-textured skin and abundance of color that any beauty devotee might envy.

This matchless complexion beauty is the result of their mode of living. These present women work—work hard—many day in the open fields. Honest labor keeps circulation active and causes them to perspire, and perspiration in turn carries off all skin impurities and excess fat and keeps them slim, agile and clear-skinned.

They customarily carry all their burdens atop their heads, which gives them easy, straight grace and also holds the proper position all the delicate internal organs of the body. All this counts directly for health, hence for complexion loveliness.

But water—even soap and water—is not enough to keep the complexion of the average woman of today clean. This is because most of us have to work in the grime and dust of cities and towns and the dust from busy highways. Cold cream in addition, or in place of water and soap is needed for this reason.

Cold cream is oily—

Candidates Inspected; Stuart Is Off
The Fenway Bathing Beauty Revue, which is expected to set up a new record in art and theatre attendance on Massachusetts avenue, is taking definite shape through the medium of daily rehearsals. DID LINCOLN SAVE JEFF DAVIS?

Strange Story of Black Hawk War Comes Now to Light

In digging into the musty records of the past for new facts about Abraham Lincoln to be utilized in "Abraham Lincoln" now showing at the Tremont Temple, Dr. Gilbert Ellis Bailey, of the University of Southern California, historian of the company, unearthed this remarkable story:

During the Black Hawk War the Northern part of Illinois was for the most part a wilderness except for a few trading posts and the lead mines around Galena. In 1827 a road was opened up from Peoria to Galena known as the "Kellogg Trail."

Pierre Bullona, a French trader, built a very large double log cabin on this road. Bullona's squaw was a relative of one of the famous Chief Shaubena's wives. The trader's pretty daughter was to be married to another French trader, and a party of his countrymen and half breeds gathered at the Bullona place for a dance in honor of the event.

While they were dancing a party of army officers rode up and asked to stay over night. Among them were Colonel Zachary Taylor, afterwards president of the Confederacy, the latter fresh from West Point. Jefferson Davis was a fine dancer, but he danced too often with one of the fair maids. A jealous lover drew a knife and threatened Davis. Lincoln sprang between them and held them apart with his long arms until Colonel Taylor could restore peace.

"Janice Meredith" Opens in New York August 5th

The Cosmopolitan Corporation announces that the world premiere of Marion Davies in "Janice Meredith" will take place at the Cosmopolitan Theatre on August 5.

"Janice Meredith" has been adapted by Lillie Hayward from the same name by the late Paul Leicester Ford. E. Mason Hopper directed the picture. It is a romance of the revolutionary period of American history, and many characters are those conspicuous in its early development.

The period of the screen play will embrace the entire revolutionary era from 1775 to 1783, and many important battles famed in history have been filmed, including the Battle of Trenton, Washington's Crossing the Delaware, prior to the battle, the Battle of Yorktown and the surrender of the British.

More than seven thousand five hundred persons altogether appear in the feature. The Twenty-sixth U. S. A. infantry and more than five hundred soldiers from Fort Ethan Allen were utilized in the scenes showing Washington crossing the Delaware, the Battle of Trenton and Valley Forge.

Among those supporting Miss Davies in important roles are Holbrook Blinn, Harrison Ford, Maclyn Arbuckle, George Nash, Tyrone Power, Joseph Kilgour, W. C. Fields, George Siegmann, Spencer Charters, Olin Howland, May Vokes, Douglas Stevenson, Princess de Bourbon, Mildred Arden, Leo Begra, Edgar Nelson, Harlan Knight, Hattie Delaro, Mrs. Maclyn Arbuckle, Helen Lee Worthing, Wilfred Noy and Kenneth Maynard.

RICH HOTEL GUESTS PROTEST AUTO NOISE

Fitchburg, Aug. 2.—Thaddeus F. Keith, proprietor of the Hotel Johnsonia, Fitchburg's most exclusive residential hotel, has asked the Superior Court of Worcester County to issue an injunction forbidding a motor transportation company from loading trucks at night within hearing distance of the hotel.

According to Mr. Keith, the firm has a transfer station just back of the hotel. Fitchburg's wealthy and socially prominent citizens, attempting to snatch a few hours' sleep in the early morning, are harassed, says their host, by the constant sound of banging boxes and crashing trucks.

NECESSITY IS TURNED TO VIRTUE

Making a virtue of necessity has always been regarded as one of the shrewdest feats of the human mind. W. C. Fields, star of "Poppy," which comes to the Majestic Theatre on Monday, admits that his career on the stage was based upon that very theory.

"I chose juggling as an occupation," Mr. Fields said, "because it was the only thing I could do to get on the stage. I could juggle all right, but it was hard to get an engagement, because I had no wardrobe, and performers were supposed to have nice looking clothes. After I had been jobless long enough, good old necessity once more became mother to invention, and I decided to become a tramp juggler.

"In my ragged clothes and with a tramp makeup I presented myself to the manager of a cheap vaudeville house. I told him I had originated this unique style of makeup, that it was very new to America, although popular abroad, and he fell for it. I got a week's engagement, and the audience seemed to get so much fun out of my trick manoeuvres as it did out of my juggling."

Old Howard Joins Mutual Burlesque Wheel

This season the Howard will play the attractions of the Mutual burlesque circuit which will introduce a number of new faces. They will include Al Reeves, Billy Gilbert, Lew Kelly, Lee Hickman, Billy Hagen, Anna Toebe, Minnie Harrison, Mike Sacks, Edgar Bixley, Gus Fay, Billy Spencer, Billy Wallace, Joe Burton, Harry Fields, Rube Nelson, George Murphy, Pat White, Lew Ross, Arthur Mayer, Mitty Devere, Ed Jordan, Max Coleman, George Carroll and Bob Girard.

Musical Comedy Star With Mr. Gerard's Burlesque

That burlesque is attracting the stars of the musical comedy stage is shown in the appearance this season of Elsa May as prima donna of Barney Gerard's "Follies of the Day" at Waldron's Casino.

Elsa May is a former player in musical comedy, having appeared as leading woman in many notable productions. For several seasons she was with Fred Stone in "Follies of the Day." Miss May has abundant opportunity to show her versatility. To her fall most of the song hits of the show and also she has many chances to display her talent as a dancer.

BEERY TAKES LESSONS IN VILLAINY

Noah Beery, one of the screen's best known "heavies," learned his "villaining" from an unique source—if you must know, from Jesse James himself. Noah may be seen now in "Wanderer of the Wasteland" at the Fenway, but this time he isn't much of a villain.

Dropping back a few years you find Noah enrolled as a pupil in the Webster School in Kansas City. Right then came the thrill of his life. Across from him sat Jesse James, Jr., son of the famous American character!

The juniors become friends. Jesse often told Noah thrilling stories of adventure and Noah soon came to know every character associated with Jesse James from tales related by his son.

A few years later, the stage was calling for "villains," and Noah and Wallace answered the call.

William de Mille, the picture producer, had just finished writing "Stronghearr." He cast Noah Beery in the heavy role and Marguerite Abbott as the leading lady. Outside of the theatre, Beery put one over on the hero of the drama. The villain married the leading lady.

Noah Beery and his wife finished the season with "Stronghearr." They wanted a home, and were tired of hotels and "taylor" trunks. De Mille suggested that they go West and try pictures. Hollywood claimed them, and hasn't released Noah in twelve years.

WINS FORTUNE WITH NEW IDEA

Producer Turns Down Salary for a Split In Royalties

To be one of the most successful stage producers drawing royalties from half a dozen productions and yet universally believed to be a negro is the plaint of A. Walter Brooks, who staged "Little Jessie James," which comes to the Wilbur on Monday.

Brooks is of a new school of producers. His steps and dances, which are believed to be intricate, are nothing but tricks. A shift of the foot, a twitch of the shoulder, a gesture with the arm; these and other little things have made him successful. The belief as to Brooks' color comes from the fact that he staged two of the most successful colored shows ever presented. Brooks is still a young man and hails from the West. Since he has been producing in New York he has never accepted a straight fee for his work; he works only on a royalty basis, such as an author or composer gets.

In this way Brooks is garnering a small fortune and the six shows, which he staged and which are now operating successfully, bring him in a tidy income.

SHE'S PINCH HITTER IN POLITICAL GAME

MISS HELEN CANTY

Miss Helen Canty, sister of Representative William A. Canty, of Ward 15, Roxbury, and secretary to Congressman George Holden Tinkham, is a happy girl today.

Through her loyalty to her brother, who is a patient at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, recuperating from a severe illness, and unable to take out or file nomination papers for reelection from the Roxbury ward, she took out the papers for him and obtained many times the signatures required, filing them with the election commissioners hours before closing time.

'TELLEGEN' DUPES ALL AT BEACH

Beats Hasty Retreat With His Cerise Bathing Suit When Fraud Is Discovered

It cost just $349.96 to entertain Lou Tellegen at Nantasket Beach this week.

And they'll take it out of his hide if he returns.

Leaving scores of racing hearts in tech breasts of Nantasket's famous beauties, a tall and romantic young man with sideboards and cute little cheek-dimples, checked out at the Nantasket Hotel and left for parts unknown today, after having a "swell time" at the expense of certain gullibles of the Summer colony.

FOOLED THEM ALL.

He fooled them all. Said he was "Lou Tellegen." Registered under the name of the famous screen lover and former husband of Geraldine Farrar when he arrived at the hotel, and his room wined and dined and feted and loved by the young girls, no end.

He saw the storm clouds of exposure coming and "beat it."

"Tellegen" blew into the Nantasket Hotel on July 23 carrying a lone suitcase. He wore knickers, a sweater, and one of those dainty low-neck white shirts so popular among millionaires.

He flashed a smile very much like the one that charmed Melrose "Jerry" Farrar, puffs da cigarette in the manner of a bored Englishfop, and via "bellhop wireless" announced he was ready for the adulation of the resort.

CERISE BATHING SUIT.

A Nantasket movie theatre is showing the real Tellegen in the love-thriller, "Let No Man Put Asunder," with Pauline Frederick.

The management was "tipped off" by the well-known bon vivant, "Teddy" Bergman of the Nayahoa Hotel, that Tellegen himself was at the beach.

Whereupon it was arranged between the tall dimpled on and the movie management that "Lou" would appear in person at the theatre.

Meanwhile, "Dimples," who some say is New York barber, was feted and dined at various cafes, hotels and cottages.

He was the talk and the toast of the beach.

And when he bathed in the surf, girls—Oh—

Dorothy William McCormick discovered he couldn't swim six strokes though he wore on "bath days" a cerise bathing suit and white belt monogrammed "L. T." on the buckle.

Dr. McCormick told Willard Gallagher about "Lou."

GOES AWAY FROM THERE

Willard wired a friend at the Astor in New York. The friend is in the motion picture business. He wired a reply stating that Lou Tellegen the screen star was in California.

What a wow!

The Nantasket "screen hero" beat a hasty retreat with the lone Bangor bag. He promised to return Sunday.

A reception committee composed of Park O'Brien, Willard Gallagher, Dr. William McCormick, "Johnny" Paterson and members of the Navahoe Club will greet Lou on his return here.

"Let No Man Put Asunder?"

"Just let him come," the committee wails.

RAID HOME OF NIECE OF TAFT

Ninety-five Cases of Liquor Found at the Residence of Prominent Clubman

New York, Aug. 2—There was an air of uneasiness at prohibition headquarters today following a raid by two dry agents on the home of Hugo Gilbert de Fritsch, prominent clubman whose wife is a niece by marriage of Chief Justice William Howard Taft.

Ninety-five cases of liquor and wines were seized.

The raiding agents obtained a search warrant from United States Commissioner Boyle on their sworn statements that they had seen a case of liquor carried into the de Fritsch home in an exclusive residential section.

When the agents consulted the legal staff at their headquarters following the raid they were told that the law provided for search of a private residence only when there was evidence of liquor being sold. It is certain that the agents bought no liquor at the de Fritsch home before obtaining the warrant.

They were told they had started something "new," and that although possession of liquor, unless pre-prohibition stock, would be a violation of the Volstead law, a citizen's constitutional rights against unlawful search and seizure must be respected.

A search through the records at prohibition headquarters failed to reveal any permit being taken out or of the filing of an inventory by Mr. de Fritsch listing his stock of alcoholic beverages at the time prohibition became effective.

ACTRESS FEARS FOR HER LIFE

Squad of Police Fail to Find Any Weapons on Haverhill Man

Long Beach, Calif., Aug. 2.—If John C. Howard, heir to Haverhill, Mass., salad dressing millions, intended to injure his estranged wife, Ora Carewe, when he entered the theatre in which Miss Carewe was playing, nasty looks were the only weapons he contemplated using.

The wife's mother telephoned the police when she discovered Howard in the audience. She feared the Haverhill man was going to shoot her daughter from his seat near the front of the theatre, and a squad of officers were rushed to the playhouse.

Howard and two companions, a man and a woman, were taken from the theatre. A search of their persons failed to reveal weapons of any kind so there was nothing left for the police to do but turn the party loose and inform Miss Carewe that her life wasn't in as much danger as she thought.

HOWARD SHOUTS 'FRAMEUP.'

However, a short time later police allege they found a pint of liquor in Howard's machine and he was arrested on a charge of violating the liquor laws.

"It's all a dirty frame-up," Howard said shouted when taken to police station where he furnished bond.

"I didn't have a drop of liquor in my car and hadn't been drinking. When I entered the car there was a package lying on the front seat. I tossed it into the rear of the car without even looking at it. That was the liquor. It was planted in the machine by the person who framed me."

HAVING HECTIC TIME.

FIND ICE CREAM LOADED WITH BACTERIA

The City Health Department, in a campaign to rid Boston of insanitary soda fountains and soft drink establishments, has discovered that many dealers in ice cream are selling product containing excessive bacteria.

Health Commissioner Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, and Dr. Patrick H. Mullowney, deputy health commissioner, in charge of the food division of the Health Department, are actively engaged in sorting out these cases.

Health authorities say excessive bacteria in ice cream may arise from several sources. One is that ingredients are not sufficiently pure. Another is that the ingredients are manufactured or handled under improper conditions.

RECOMMEND SHIELDS.

Ice cream as delivered from manufacturers to the stores is ordinarily in five-gallon cans, and it has on the outside of the cans to turn the fresh ice cream into cans containing small quantities of mixed cream.

THIS INSANITARY CUSTOM RESULTS IN A HIGH BACTERIA COUNT.

To remedy this, a suggestion is made by health authorities that in all stores handling ice cream a shield should be installed in the ice cream chest to receive cans.

The purpose of the shield is to make it easy to take out the old can, when the old can could be readily removed. In order to use up the left over ice cream, a space holding just a gallon should be left at the end of the incoming five gallon can, which could then be utilized for this purpose.

By use of this shield "anchor ice" could be prevented from forming, and all danger of contamination while turning one can into another would be obviated, health officials point out.

Another advantage of this practice would be that the old can could be returned at short intervals to the manufacturer for proper sterilization.

DRIVE ON SCOOPS.

This, of course, would necessitate the manufacturer installing proper equipment to meet the situation, which the health department officials claim many manufacturers are now in a position to do.

A drive is to be started by food inspectors within a short time in connection with the utensils used in serving ice cream and syrups at soda fountains and soft drink parlors.

It is expected that an order will soon be sent out from the Health Department to do away with the copy dishes that hold the ice cream scoops and spoons.

Instead of changing these dishes frequently during the day, some proprietors of ice cream parlors allow the dish to remain standing by and night, while the scoops and spoons are continually dipped into water that has been exposed to dust and dirt.

POLICE TRAP IS SET FOR BOLD FUR THIEVES

From New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Baltimore, fur thieves are flocking toward Boston.

They're going to find the old town ready, Superintendent of Police Crowley announced today.

Beginning tonight, a score or more of plain clothesmen will go on duty in the fur and diamond section, known in police parlance as the high price district.

The police will be disguised as milkmen, chauffeurs and common laborers.

Suspicion will be directed particularly toward persons who park automobiles on side streets in the fur districts in the early morning hours.

Fur thieves have been encouraged by the success of the members of their craft in the last few breaks in Boston.

Through underworld channels, Superintendent Crowley has been informed that a Boston invasion is under way.

POLITICS---The 1924 Campaign

URGE COOLIDGE TO FIGHT FOR NORTHWEST

Washington, Aug. 2 (Universal).—President Coolidge agreed to carry his campaign into the La Follette strongholds in the Northwest, has been asked to consent to the establishment of "front porch" headquarters in Minneapolis.

Senator Curtis, of Kansas, Republican whip, put the proposal up to the President.

Senator Curtis said that reports showed the fight in the Northwest had narrowed down between Coolidge and La Follette, and that no sentiment had developed for the candidacy of John W. Davis, Democratic nominee.

Curtis told the President he had just received a letter from Senator Capper, stating La Follette would poll more votes than Davis in Kansas. He also called attention to report from Minnesota that the Republicans, with the right sort of fight, can win its electoral votes.

Republicans candidly admit they plan to saddle on La Follette any odium that attaches to the present administration because of railroad legislation and the agricultural situation. Because he organized the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate, the agricultural committee of both branches of Congress are made up largely of his followers.

Otherwise, they will meet at the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt, at Hyde Park on the occasion of the clambake of Dutchess County Democrats, which both Mr. Davis and Governor Smith will attend.

Mr. Davis spent only about an hour at his headquarters here today, during which he had a long talk with former United States Senator William H. Chilton of West Virginia.

LA FOLLETTE'S TICKET SAFE IN NEVADA

Washington, Aug. 2 (Universal).—The LaFollette-Wheeler ticket is "over the top" in Nevada, according to a telegram received by Senator La Follette from his campaign manager, Representative John Nelson in Chicago.

Nelson reported more than 2,000 names had been signed to the petition to put the Progressive ticket on the Nevada ballot, and that more than 5,000 are expected before the petition is filed August 5. The State law requires 2,750, or ten per cent. of the total vote cast at the last election.

La Follette headquarters was pleased to learn of the attitude toward the ticket of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in session at Atlantic City.

It was pointed out by Progressive leaders that Governor Bryan of Nebraska and later John W. Davis followed the Progressive program with reference to mobilization day.

DAVIS BACKERS TURN TO HYLAN FOR GOVERNOR

By SEARS TAYLOR.

New York, Aug. 1 (Universal).—When John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, arrived at his campaign headquarters today he brought completed his speech of acceptance to be delivered when he is officially notified of his nomination August 11 at Clarksburg, W. Va.

The address after a final review was sent to the printers.

Governor Smith, who is at Seagate for a rest, may call on Davis today at Locust Valley.

Party leaders declare Davis will find it impossible to persuade Smith to run again for Governor. As a second choice they are considering Mayor Hylan. Tammany Hall leaders had declared Smith would have to run "for the sake of the party" but today were inclined to favor Hylan.

Thomas J. Spellacy, newly appointed eastern campaign manager, took charge of the Democratic headquarters at the Murray Hill Hotel. Clem Shaver, national chairman, left for Washington to confer with leaders. He expects to return here and to accompany Davis to Clarksburg, August 8.

Later Shaver will go to Chicago and the Pacific Coast to establish headquarter branches.

COOLIDGES MAY COME TO WEEK'S HOME

The "Summer White House" may be in New England.

Secretary of War John W. Weeks has invited President Calvin Coolidge to use the secretary's fine Summer home, "Mount Prospect," at Lancaster, N. H., for this purpose.

It is believed the President will leave Washington for a short visit to Mr. Weeks' palatial bungalow.

"Mount Prospect" would make an ideal resting place for the President. The bungalow is of white stucco, 70 feet long and 28 feet wide.

It is two stories high and has a curving roof edge similar in contour to those of the thatched cottages of England and Ireland. The living room and dining rooms are on the first floor, while the entire second floor is a recreation room, with opportunities for music, billiards, etc. Surrounding views of the Green Mountains of Vermont and White Mountains of New Hampshire may be obtained from the numerous balconies and verandas with which the bungalow is equipped.

Mount Pleasant may be seen to the west, the village of Lancaster to the north and the Presidential Range of the White Mountains on the south.

In the surrounding valleys farmers may be seen gathering hay and lovely views of the Connecticut River are had.

The entire eminence on which "Mount Prospect" rests belongs to the Secretary of War.

When President Coolidge enters the house he will pass through the south entrance into a simply arranged reception hall. To the right he will enter the dining room, which has red tile floor and oak furniture with leather covered chairs. On either side of a large field stone fireplace in the dining room is a china closet set in the wall. A buffet rests in a corner of the room.

The house contains no telephone as the Secretary of War goes there for rest.

FLAG-SEWING BEES FOR GERMAN WOMEN

Berlin, Aug. 2.—The flag sewing bees of the American colonial days are being emulated by the democratic women of Germany who are rallying to the support of "Constitution Day," August 10, by supplying the shops with homemade flags. The systematic boycott of the black, red and gold republic has resulted in a chronic shortage of the stocks of flags, to overcome which the democratic elements organized these domestic sewing circles.

The anniversary of the adoption of the German constitution is encountering antagonism in reactionary strongholds where the ostentatious boycott of the republican colors continues to be a popular sport.

BOSTON AUTOIST HURT AT HAMPTON BEACH

Hampton Beach, N. H., Aug. 2.—Automobiles driven by Shirley Olmstead of No. 20 Main street, Lancaster, and George W. McCaffery of No. 3 Bramwick street, Auburndale, Mass., were in collision on Ocean boulevard, near Boar's Head. Mr. McCaffery has a broken arm and minor injuries. Olmstead and companions, Wayne J. COUNTRY'S TURF CHAMPIONS ENTERED TO MEET IPINAR

BIG FIELDS IN SPECIAL STAKES

By TOM THORP.

No less than 102 thoroughbreds have been named to meet Pierre Wertheimer's great French colt, Epinard, in the three special international turf races, to be decided this Fall. If Uncle Sam does not develop a champion out of this collection, he will have a right to offer.

When Pierre Wertheimer came over to America last Winter with a chip on his shoulder, nobody expected his challenge would arouse the quality of interest that is being manifested on all sides. Horsemen in the East, West and South are doing their mightiest to put forth a thoroughbred that will keep the international honors that Zev won from Papyrus last Fall in this country for at least another year.

No deep is the interest in the coming international tests that a record number of entries have been received by the officials in charge of the staging of the three races. In the exciting test which is to be decided at Belmont Park on Labor Day, no less than nineteen aspirants of the first water have been named by their owners. This is perhaps one of the most select fields of sporting material that has ever been brought together in a single season.

GREAT MILE FIELD.

In the second race of the series, a one-mile test, at Aqueduct, L. I., on September 27, a field of twenty-four starters is named in the nominations. Out of this assortment can be found the greatest score of the present and past seasons' three year olds. Mad Hatter, Zev, Snob 2d, Wilderness, Ladkin Ordinance, Wise Counselor, Junior, Dr. Gosbuck and Polo Grounds are among those that are training in the hope of being in proper condition to face the barrier in a contender with the great French champion.

It may be the winner of the race will come out of the above list, for as able lot that have not been named above. However, so far as past performances are concerned, it is likely that Epinard will meet Mad Waterloo he will do so at the hand of some of those listed above.

Grey Lag and Snob 2d are said to be in the best condition of those named. Zev and Wilderness are sure to show a vast improvement before the end of the Fall racing meeting. Both colts have always favored the Spa course for training. Zev was unheard of as a juvenile until he arrived at the popular up-State track.

WILDERNESS GOOD AT SPA.

Wilderness has always run his best race at Saratoga. Tom J. Healey is the quality of trainer that can get his horses in the best possible shape for a record performance. Last season he had Wilderness in his very best form at the Spa meeting. The fact that R. T. Wilson, owner of Wilderness, is president of the Saratoga Racing Association, may have something to do with the way his horses run at the Spa course.

The Latonia race, at one mile and a quarter, has attracted forty-nine thoroughbreds. Matt J. Winn, genial Kentucky racing official, has broadened his conditions for the match race. The contests at Belmont Park and Latonia are the only gatherings from the list of eighteen.

The Latonia event is open to three-year-olds and upward, mares and geldings being eligible. For this reason, Matt Winn has received a greater number of entries for his race than any of his rivals.

Those who have witnessed Epinard win most of his races in Europe say that he is more of a sprinter than a route coverer. Trainer Eugene Leigh refuses this. Being the one that is best qualified to talk, the public must accept the word of this sportsman.

DAZZY VANCE EQUALS TWO STRIKEOUT MARKS

New York, Aug. 2.—Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn National pitcher, tied the world record for consecutive strikeouts by fanning seven batters in a row in his 4 to 0 victory over Chicago at Brooklyn. The record was established by Hod Eller of the Cincinnati Nationals in the 1919 world series with the Chicago White Sox.

Vance also tied his own 1923 major league record of 15 strike-outs for a single game. Every man on the Chicago team except Hollocher fanned at least once. Hartnett, slugging Cub catcher, was three times a victim of Vance's fast ball.

GLENNA COLLETT AGAIN WINS INVITATION TITLE

New London, Ct., Aug. 2.—Miss Glenna Collett, representing the Rhode Island Country Club, repeated her last year's performance by winning the championship match for the women's invitation golf tournament at the Shennecossett links. TARAMASCHI IN DRAW WITH STASIAK

The question of supremacy between Angelo Taramaschi, Italian heavyweight champion, and Stanley Stasiak, Polish title holder, is still very much up in the air, since their finish bout at the Revere Beach oval was called to a halt and declared a draw after two hours of mauling.

Taramaschi put up a great scrap, inasmuch as he had a bout with Strangler Lewis in sight if he took the decision, but Stasiak held him even throughout.

Frank Voudoo of South Boston defeated Lawson Pinkham of Attleboro in thirty-one minutes in the semifinal.

Other results were: Frank Delamano of Worcester victor over John Sousa of Taunton in 12 minutes, and Tommy Rivard of Boston winner over Kid White of Providence in 27 minutes.

HELEN WILLS REGRETS NO TIFT WITH SUZANNE

New York, Aug. 2.—Miss Helen Wills, youthful tennis champion of the Olympics, who arrived on the Aquitania, said that the one regret of her trip is that she had been unable to arrange a match with Suzanne Lenglen, French champion.

"Mlle. Lenglen's tennis technique and style are quite different from those of the American players," said Miss Wills, "but I think she is a wonderful player, and I hope to be matched against her in the future."

Miss Wills said she found the English courts just as satisfactory as those of this country. She will play in the women's national tornament here, she stated, after which she will go to Boston and later to her home in Berkeley, Cal.

TITLE BATTLE HANGS ON BOUTS AT NOSTRAND

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The star bouts at the Nostrand Athletic Club in Brooklyn tonight probably will be forerunners to championship matches. In one of the featured attractions Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion and conqueror of the world's titleholder, Pancho Villa, before that fighting son of the Philippines won his crown, will meet Irish Johnny Curtin, the Jersey City scrapper tonight. In the semi-final Mike Ballerino, the Bayonne Italian, engages his bitter rival, Johnny Leonard of Allentown, in a return battle.

Genaro and Villa are almost sure to stage a return engagement within the next two months. Ballerino and Leonard will be fighting for a match with Kid Sullivan for the latter's junior lightweight title.

STUFFY'S BROTHER IS NOW BUSH MANAGER

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 2.—"Al" McInnis, batting Giant outfielder, Mann, and proud brother of "Stuffy," was made manager of the Manchester team of the Central League today by Johnny Mitchell, former Somerville High School star.

Al follows in the footsteps of his prominent brother, inasmuch as he plays the first sack. He is the most popular player on the club.

EAGLE NINE TO MEET SPRUCE FOR GONFALON

An important game in the Inter City League will be played on Boston Common Sunday between the Eagle A. A. of the North End and the Spruce A. C. of Chelsea. These two teams are tied for first places with Sunday's game deciding the championship.

Vin Richards Tells Inside on Olympics

New York, Aug. 2 (Universal).—Vincent Richards, youthful holder of the Olympic tennis singles championship, and the other members of the victorious American Olympic tennis team, arrived in New York late tonight on the Aquitania. The Yale crew, winners of the Olympic eight-oared race, were also aboard.

Richards, in a talk with Universal Service, of which he is a staff correspondent, declared that the trip and four weeks of competition at the Wimbledon tourney and at Paris would be ever memorable.

"I was particularly taken," he said, "with the sportsmanship of the French players—Rene Cochet, Jean Borotra and Rene La Coste. I'm sorry to say, however, that the French tennis fans might take a lesson from the players's book. While not exactly unsportsmanlike, they are given to loud outbreaks, not at all meeting.

RANKS COCHET BEST.

"The French enthusiasts seem unable to control their feelings. It is natural to expect they would be pro-French, but, at the same time, they might have been more subtle about it. I cannot say too much for the sportsmanship of the British at Wimbledon."

Of the French players, Richards considers Cochet, whom he defeated in the final round for the Olympic title, the best.

"He is a real sportsman," the young star declared. "After he had defeated me, he, of course, had his regrets, but he was eager and whole-hearted in his congratulation. I will not soon forget his fineness."

The highlight of Richards' campaign abroad, as would be supposed, was his victory. But hardly second in thrills was his exhibition in San Sebastian with Queen Victoria as a partner against Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman and Julian Myrick, in charge of the American team.

King Alphonse of Spain, a great sportsman, showed it according to Richards by his demonstrations. The King did not play tennis, but evinced much interest in the proceedings, and played a big part socially.

An unforgeable feature, apart from the unsportsmanship of the French gallery, was the lack of well equipped quarters for the players in the Olympics, Richards said. There was no place for drinking water, which proved irritating, particularly to the women players. It appeared to Richards that the French Olympic committee found conducting such a great affair as the Olympics too heavy for their organization.

Richards feels he owes himself a rest before indulging in strenuous match play, and does not think he will engage in any before the national championship. He and Frankie T. Hunter, Olympic double champions, will take part in an exhibition at Newport, the famous Norman F. Brooks and Gerald L. Patterson of Australia tomorrow at the Crescent Club, Brooklyn.

RED SOX CLOSE SERIES WITH WHITE SOX

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Another disastrous series for the Red Sox draws to a close here this afternoon when Fohl's men tackle the White Sox in the fourth game of the series. In their last seven successive battles with Evers' machine the lads from Fenway Park have experienced nothing but defeats, and in an effort to banish the jinx Fohl proposes to start Bill Piercy on the peak. The burly blonde is to be pitted against Charley Robertson, the no-hit kid.

This will mark Robertson's first actual start on the firing line in several weeks, although he worked out lightly twice the role of relief artist against the Yankees earlier in the week, tolling five innings in the two assignments. Robertson's operation necessitated the removal of a piece of bone from his right elbow, the cutting being similar to that undergone by Red Faber.

After closing their engagement here tonight, the Back Bay tourists will embark for Cleveland, where they are slated to play the Indians four times in as many days.

BERLENBACH DEMANDS $10,000 FOR BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

PAUL BERLENBACH, greatest puncher developed in the middleweight division since the days of Stanley Ketchel, apparently must have read that part of the Bible which says:

"Ask and thou shalt receive."

When offered a Boston match with Hambone Kelly, another heavy swatter, Berlenbach announced he was prepared to take on the bout, but that he must get $10,000 for his services. This probably explains why Tom Goodwin hasn't been cheerful during the past few days.

Young Kloby is the only fighter to ever receive $10,000 for a bout in New England. Goodwin, who at the time was acting as matchmaker for Schoie Wilson's club in Salem, paid Kloby $11,000 for his second tussle with Eddie Shevlin. This included the rights to the moving pictures. As Shevlin pulled down $3,500 and the show only drew $18,000, the venture was a failure when the cost of building the arena, preliminaries and other expenses were paid.

Kloby received $9,000 for his contest with Nate Siegal in this city. This is the same amount Johnny Wilson was paid when, as middleweight champion, he battled George Robinson at the Arena.

* * *

BERLANBACH has made more money in New York this year than any other fighter. He got $14,000 for his contest with Jack Delaney, while his end of bouts with men like Augie Ratner has been $7,500. New York, of course, has a tremendous population to draw upon. It is the ideal spot for "big" shows. Naturally Berlenbach won't come to Boston unless he gets his price as long as he can get plenty of engagements in New York at top money.

The Silk Fund show, for example, guaranteed Berlenbach $15,000 for his tussle with Stribling which was called off when Paul was injured. Damon Runyon, talented writer of the New York American, stated in his column that Berlenbach's hitability to keep his engagement with Stribling cut the gate receipts of the Milk Fund show by $50,000.

* * *

PAT McCARTHY of Roxbury, who is clamoring for a tussle with Johnny Wilson, can make the poundage and defeat the former middleweight champion. McCarthy, naturally big, shows at his best when scaling around 168 pounds. When he reduces to 163 pounds, he is too weak to get the old sting into his right hand punch, and Wilson and McCarthy would have an even chance of winning from Wilson.

* * *

THE story from Washington to the effect that Luis Firpo, after visiting the White House at the meeting President Coolidge, asked "Who is that fellow?" is ridiculous, Firpo's supposed ignorance of American affairs and sports being the knowledge of the English language have been capitalized by a flock of press agents who don't know the difference between good publicity and notoriety.

Firpo is as well educated as the average American. Furthermore, he can talk English fairly well and also knows our customs. When he visited the White House he probably did so chiefly so that he might chat briefly with President. We don't doubt but that Firpo and Coolidge talked in English.

* * *

THIS writer has spent considerable time with Firpo. At Atlantic City last summer we were interviewing Firpo in English when one of his many interpreters tried to butt in, insisting that Luis talk in Spanish. We told the interpreter we didn't care for his assistance and then resumed our conversation with the South American, but in Spanish. As long as Firpo's "armed guard" was so anxious to have the interview in Spanish we thought he would please it. Firpo, though, is capable of talking very good English when he wishes to do so.

* * *

FIRPO is a fighter merely because he can get more money in this way than in business. He doesn't get any thrill out of knocking out an opponent. The only thrill Luis receives from the fistic racket is when he is paid a fabulous sum for his ring services.

Plan to Change the System of Play at Wimbledon

Before next year's international tennis tournament is held at Wimbledon an effort will be made to arrange the various events so that they will not overlap, thus bringing about a more equitable distribution of nervous energy, according to the London Field. "The time has arrived so to construct the order of play that the singles are pursued independently of the doubles," says the writer. "If Burrows would devise a plan amenable to the committee of management by which each competition would not seriously overlap another, we believe a good deal of nervous energy would be conserved and a more equitable distribution of physical strain be insured."

"Glory," says Luis, "dies once your name passes from the front pages of the newspapers. Gold in the bank continues to pile up interest when sport followers have forgotten all about your deeds of valor in the ring."

A wise philosopher is Dead Pan Louie.

DUTCH LEONARD MAY BE REINSTATED NEXT WEEK

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Hubert H. "Dutch" Leonard, former American League pitcher, cannot be reinstated in organized baseball until August 6, Baseball Commissioner Landis said when told that the player was coming from Fresno, Cal., to see him.

Leonard was placed on the ineligible list when he deserted organized baseball in 1921, and joined the Fresno club in the San Joaquin Valley League, where he played in 1922 and 1923. On January 6 of this year he sought reinstatement and was told by the commissioner that it would be necessary for him to disassociate himself from ineligibles for a year before reinstatement.

Leonard, it is understood, will join the Detroit Americans as soon as he is reinstated.

SAKARA BEATS HUB MARE AT WORCESTER

Worcester, Aug. 2.—The pool penoed racing program was finished up as per schedule with Sakara winning the fast 2:10 trot, beating the Boston mare Palestrina in handy fashion and winning with two fast miles.

The 2:19 pace was a long drawn out affair. Stampfast, a local horse, won the event and everybody was pleased when the final whirl in this class had been negotiated.

Blue Jay won the three-year-old trot, and Al Kahani Bild, the two-year-old stake, at the same call.

KINSEY NET VICTORY MARKS THE PASSING OF JOHNSTON

SURPRISE IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Seabright, N. J., Aug. 2.—The booming strokes from the racquet of Harcourt Kinsey rolled the knell of the passing of one of the world's tennis heroes when William Johnston, national champion in 1918 and 1919 and mainstay with Tilden of America's Davis Cup forces since 1920, was defeated by his fellow-Californian in the final round of the invitation tournament at the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club in five sets, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3.

In reality it was but the reckoning of an ominous note in the Davis Cup challenge round last year when Johnston was defeated by James Anderson of Australia and echoed in the final of the national championship when Tilden crushed the player with whom he wrested the Davis Cup from Australia in 1920. Those two defeats marked the handwriting on the wall.

Johnston's defeat by Kinsey brings to an end his succession of victories beginning with 1921. In that year and in 1922 and 1923 he defeated R. Norris Williams in the final and won the Seabright bowl outright last year. Kinsey is the first to gain a leg on the new bowl put into competition for this tournament. As this is the first tournament in which Johnston has appeared on grass this season it may seem premature to judge his ability on the match. But for the last three years he has been able to come through successfully and in no season of the three was his work so disappointing.

In Kinsey, Johnston met a player ranking within the first 10 for the first time since he came East last week and Kinsey provided the acid test.

Miss Mary K. Browne scored the first California victory earlier in the day when she overwhelmed Miss Mayme Macdonald, national clay court champion, in the women's singles final. The score was 6—3, 6—1, and it was just as decisive as the figures indicate. Miss MacDonald's deep drive was entirely too soft to prevail against the severity of Miss Brown's drive and her alert volleying and smashing at the net.

TERRY PARKER NOW WITH SOLLY SNYDER

Terry Parker of the North End has placed himself under the management of Solly Snyder, who also manages Jim Clark, Allentown, Pa., middleweight.

The North End youth, who is twenty years old, has defeated Tommy Nee, Andy Martin twice, Jimmy "Kid" Rice of Portland, Willie Sherrie and lost a close decision to "Red" Chapman a short while ago. Parker has met with only one reverse in twenty-seven bouts, which is a creditable record to be only a year ago deserted the amateur ranks after winning the national title.

SIX CHAMPS IN BIKE CLASSIC AT REVERE

With champions, former champions, star amateurs, and aspirants for the championship battling in the bike carnival at the Revere Cycle Track tonight, cycle fans are looking forward to some of the fastest and most thrilling racing of the year.

Foremost on the program is the Red DO, a one-hour paced race, a cycling classic taken from the French.

The riders selected for tonight's race are George Chapman, Vincent Madonna, Clarence Carman, Frank Corey, Marcel Godivier and Hoad Wynsdau.

For the lovers of sprint racing four of the world's premier dash riders are to compete in a three-heat sprint. Orlando Piani, Arthur Spencer, Alfred Grenda and Fred Spencer.

Piani is the Italian champion and has held the title for eleven consecutive years. Arthur Spencer was the first rider to win the American title from Frank Kramer. Willie Grenda is well known as a six-day cyclist and is a former Australian champion. Fred Spencer is one of the younger generation and has been making a great name for himself this season on the Newark track.

YANKS' STADIUM FOR TITLE GO

New York, Aug. 2.—The Benny Leonard-Mickey Walker bout for the welterweight championship of the world has finally landed a home in this city where enough fans may pack into the arena to make the scrap financially worthwhile for the perfectionists. The plans for the Yankee Stadium and the date August 29, in case of rain on that date, the bout will be held on August 22. The match is scheduled to go fifteen rounds to a decision.

The bout will be promoted by James J. Johnston. Tex Rickard, who had the battle but no place or size in New York City in which to hold it, nominally withdrew, reaching an agreement with Johnston.

It is understood that Johnston in return for the Walker-Leonard fight, will let Rickard use the stadium for the Wills-Firpo scrap in September.

President Applauds U. S. Olympic Athletes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—President Coolidge sent the following message to American athletes who took part in the Olympic games, now en route home from France:

President Coolidge

"While the nation awaits the return of our winning athletes to home shores, I take this method to extend sincerest congratulations to every member of the team. Our pride was stirred as reports reached us of your successive victories over what was described as the most impressive international group of athletes ever assembled for the revival of the ancient Greek games. We were thrilled as records that had stood through generations were supplanted by new marks through the sterling performance of those chosen to represent us.

"On field, on track and on water the achievements of our athletes were without parallel, and the impressiveness of the victories was glorified by the sportmanly conduct which earned all admiration.

"America is proud of the triumph and conduct of her Olympic team of 1924."

91,000 TO SEE FIRPO FIGHT SAYS TEX

By SID MERCER.

Between conferences over the Walker-Leonard situation at Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon, Tex Rickard found time to discuss his favorite subject—the Firpo-Wills melody.

Tex assumes rather a bored air when talking about the welterweight championship match, but he enthuses over his heavyweight show.

"I honestly believe it's going to outdraw the Dempsey-Firpo fight," he declared, "and if ringside seats were $50, as they were for Dempsey and Carpentier, I think it would set a new record. I'm sure it will do capacity at Boyle's Thirty Acres and we can seat 91,000 persons there.

"I base my estimates on the demand for tickets. The show is more than six weeks away, yet in the last three days we have booked thousands of orders for ringside seats. The tickets will go on sale next Monday.

"The sort of people who are putting in their orders now are those who attend only the big boxing spectacles. Many requests for blocks of tickets have come in from downtown financial firms. My mail is getting heavy with orders and the telephones are ringing all the time.

"I want to emphasize the fact that the arena will be perfectly safe. I would be a fool not to take every precaution. The insurance people will not take any risks until their engineers make their reports and I comply with all their requests.

"Surely they would not place insurance of $500,000 on the bowl for a premium of only a few thousand unless they were satisfied it is perfectly safe."

Firpo and his various managers, secretaries, sparring partners and cooks, departed last night for Saratoga, where the Wild Bull will be on exhibition next Sunday at Tom Luther's Sulphur Springs camp.

Mayor Curley's is the first family enrolled.

Why not make the I PLAY SAFE CLUBS under the names of cities and towns and boom the safety note so loudly that it will ring constantly in the ears of every motorist and particularly in the ears of reckless and careless drivers.

Not only did Mayor Curley sign up as "Daddy" Curley, but Mrs. Curley also signed a pledge and James, Jr., a handsome lady of seventeen. Just back from his first trip abroad; Mary, 16; Dorothy, 13; Paul, 12; Leo, 9; George, 5; and even Francis X., the bouncing baby of the household, born last December, is a safety fan.

The Mayor's family added nine names to the membership of the I PLAY SAFE CLUB and "Daddy" and "Mamma" Curley call on all other fathers and mothers in Boston to sign up with their families.

MAYOR PRAISES "I PLAY SAFE"

CITY OF BOSTON
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
CITY HALL

JAMES M. CURLEY
Mayor

To the Editor,
Boston American,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

I thoroughly approve of the "I Play Safe" Club of the Boston American, which is designed to minimize the dangers of the highways, by pledging motorists to drive with care, giving constant attention to the rules of the road and avoiding those methods that have made life perilous on the highways and converted motoring from a pleasure to a hazard.

Every owner and driver of a machine should feel it a duty to belong to such a club which is a pledge to law and order, to the safety of human life and to the discouragement and penalizing of those who make hazardous the highways of the Commonwealth. The organization of this club is a splendid piece of work and an appeal to good citizenship and it is the duty of every one owning or using a motor vehicle to join it and add his personal influence to the much needed crusade for public safety. I trust the response to the appeal of the Boston American will be prompt and numerous.

With an average of one person killed for every one thousand automobiles recorded in Massachusetts last year, I cheerfully join the Boston American's "I Play Safe" Club.

Sincerely yours,
James M. Curley
Mayor.

NEW YORK AUTO DEATHS SHOW BIG INCREASE

New York, Aug. 2.—Motor vehicles killed 188 persons in this State in July, according to a report of the National Highways Protective Society, which makes the total deaths in the State this year 1136, much more than last year.

"These deaths will continue to increase," said Colonel Edward S. Cornell, president of the society, "as long as drivers of automobiles which kill pedestrians are let off lightly with. Many of them are not punished at all."

In New York City the July death total from automobiles was 58. Sixteen occupants of motor vehicles were killed at train crossings. Two boys killed four.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

RADIO concerts from out of town are becoming so popular that practically all of the local stations are remaining quiet one day a week. This is a wonderful idea but what we need most of all is a silent night at home.

THERE should be at least four days a month when the men can do as much talking as they wish.

ALL listening and no speaking makes Jack a dull husband.

MAN was gifted with a loud speaker the same as woman and he likes to get a chance to use it.

YOU can at least let your husband speak even if you don't pay any attention to what he says.

HE may not know what he's talking about but look at all the fun he's having.

3 MINUTE JOURNEYS

By Temple Manning

STRANGE as it may seem, since it is used drinking it daily, the English invigorate the fast down from the most northern waters—sometimes ice cold and even the rapid streams of Alaska are crowded with trout.

And they transport very well, too. Even in the River Indus, which runs right through the still steaming city Bombay, the fish can live out of the water for a long time, and for that matter, the Ganges, the Nile and the Amazon are all Englishmen need as far as fish a few Kashmirian excursions they wish to go fishing and everything is made ready for them.

Most of the trout streams are rapid and swirling, and all good Washingtonians know that a trout can take almost as much exercise as a boat sufficiently still for rapid waters. And it's impossible to accurately cast a fly unless the boat is very still.

This obstacle is overcome in Kashmir in a novel way. They don't take boats. A servant carries his employer piggyback out into the hot stream. Another servant attaches the bait to the hook, and throws the line. Nothing remains for the "sportsman" to do but balance himself on the back of his servant and hold the line until he feels a pull. The servant hands the trout in.

As soon as English sportsmen reach Ceylon or Kashmir, they immediately apply for a fishing license. For without this license they are not permitted to throw out their hooks and lines and invade the Indian waters. But they are restricted almost entirely to waters stocked with trout.

Needs Ice Chest

Helping Hand Editor:

Will you please ask your readers if any of them have an ice chest or some children's clothes they do not want. I need both of them very badly. We have a small tenement and we haven't much furniture in it, but we can't buy anything until my husband gets a steady job. We can't buy much to eat, but what we do buy goes bad because we haven't any place to keep it. I have two boys, 8 and 6, and one girl, 4. They wear shoes, size 11, 8, and the little girl 8½. MRS. T. M.

Girls' Hats and Coats

Helping Hand Editor:

I have several hats that might be used in some family where there are girls. I have two grey lightweight coats and other things suitable for girls or small women and a coat and some skirts for a girl about fourteen.

I have a pair of black oxfords, men's, size seven, but a narrow width. MRS. E. F. B.

Goldberg, Peabody.

Thank you. We are sending you the address of Mrs. O. F. H. who has a large family and husband is without steady work. We will keep your offer on file regarding the size 7, narrow width, men's oxfords. We know of no one at the present time who could wear a narrow width.

To Tide Her Over

Helping Hand Editor:

Have read your worthy column of generosity and hope some readers will help me as they have helped others. I am a sick woman and a mother of one and expect another any day. My husband has been out of work for a month and hasn't any money to rely on. Now will some kind reader help me by lending a little money until my husband secures a job, or give him some employment. Will pay it back with best of appreciation. Thanking you. MRS. S. H. 1 and some other things to those unfortunate ones who have been forced out, he might change his mind about the expelling proposal. The oldest Jews went from Spain to Holland. Holland went up, Spain went down.

CHARLES FOX offers to the United States government an engine that "consumes no gas or other fuel and runs forever."

The inventor says: "You just start her up and let her flicker," and he thinks it will bring millions. It won't bring a cent. A power wiser than Charles Fox, wiser even than Calvin Coolidge, won't allow us to get "something for nothing." That would be bad for us. Therefore, there is no perpetual motion, nothing worth having, for which we don't give effort and value in return.

THE JUDGE in the Loeb-Leopold case, wisely, allows the defence to prove the mental condition of the murderers as a mitigating circumstance. We are what our minds are. And our minds are made, first of heredity and second of environment.

It is just to consider the mental condition of boys, allowed to be drunk at fifteen years of age, allowed for lack of supervision to read the vilest of books, and form the vilest of habits.

If you deliberately train an animal to kill, you do not blame it for killing. That, how[illegible] does NOT prevent hanging. If law, order and public welfare demands it.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. F. X. Mahoney
Boston Health Commissioner

WITH the bathing season at its height, there are some sensible rules that are important enough to be called into practice each and every week.

Don't go in swimming or bathing when you are overheated. If you are sweating freely, keep in a cool, sheltered place until you have cooled off somewhat or until you are thoroughly rested.

Dr. Mahoney.

Don't go in bathing right after a meal. Let your food digest first. You can get acute indigestion and become suddenly disabled in the water by being careless.

Don't stay in the water after you begin to feel steadily chilled. Twenty minutes or half an hour is long enough for the average person to stay in the water. Professional swimmers and athletes who have accustomed themselves to long periods in cold water will not be affected, but to others the chilling may have a very unfavorable effect. Certainly, the bracing effects of your dip will be counteracted by long exposure.

If you have a serious heart defect, see the family physician before going away on your vacation, if you're going to the seashore. It may become very dangerous in the water.

In spite of the odds that are against it you are careless, there is nothing better for you than a good dip, surf bathing is assured. As one of the healthiest and most satisfying of measures. It stimulates circulation and has a cooling and soothing effect upon a tired body.

Salt water, of course, is superior to fresh water bathing. It is more stimulating and is safer.

As a matter of fact, you cannot choose a more suitable vacation for the family than one by the seashore, where the water is clean and not too cold. Usually the bays along the coast contain warmer water than the outside surf and they are just as invigorating.

The most salient danger I have stressed about Summer bathing is the first one. Don't go in when you are excessively warm.

Carelessness in this particular bears up at a roll of three each season. Someone is heated up excessively from exertion in the sun and decides to take a cooling dip. His blood pressure is high from his exertion and sudden contact with much water forces it higher. Collapse and even death may follow. It's a risky thing to do.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

"J. P. Morgan has gone to Europe for the rest," remarks the Tampa Tribune, Clever.

* * *

"Dear Mr. Forbes—

"I was very much interested in your column headed, 'Sis got a swelled head. He's out.'

"I have had so much experience in watching so many young men get the big head, and it is called, that your article brings back very forcibly to us all how few men can stand great prosperity. You say, 'Power very often begets pride. Pride usually begets arrogancy, and arrogancy courts failure.' Then comes the tumble down. It would be a fine thing if more young men who are rapidly on the upgrade could read this and know what we all think about the danger that they are in.

"Yours very truly,

"ROBERT DOLLAR."

* * *

There's little sense for any reader of this column in buying just caught short of stocks and bonds since the market began to rise. A warning has quite recently been repeatedly against becoming a bear on the United States.

* * *

Z. G. Simmons, president of the Simmons Company, leading furniture manufacturing concern, finds inspiring letter to the customers and friends, which after briefly enumerating the many favorable developments of recent weeks, concludes:

"The fully market just closed in Chicago was not only the largest market we have ever enjoyed in number of pieces sold, but also in dollar volume. This convinces evidence that many of the wise furniture merchants have already sensed the great change that has come about in general business.

"Now is this state of facts, we feel that now is the time to resolutely come out and do business, let us open up the throttle valve on the gas and go ahead with full confidence. The corner has been definitely turned and business is on the upgrade."

Some big men succeed in raising the right kind of sons. Others as will know, don't. E. H. Harriman was so fortunate in being able to interest both his sons in the parental field of activity, transportation and finance. Likewise, Wm. K. Vanderbilt, Harriman has been supplying himself most ably to the development of railroads and the Wall street from W. A. Harriman & Company.

His brother, E. Roland Harriman, who has been a director of several railroads, has become a director of a financial institution, The American Trust Company. The Harriman boys have acquired a substantial interest in the New York Title and Mortgage Company, which with the American Trust Company is affiliated.

Although a very young man, Roland, who is a graduate of Yale, has for some time been a director of what are his father's pet road, the Union Pacific, and also of Delaware & Hudson and Railroad Securities Company and the Merchants' Shipbuilding Corporation.

These young Harrimans had the right kind of mother. The "Railroad Widow" said a few years ago her all has important operations—and he had such faith in her judgment that when he died left his entire fortune to her without a single string attached to it. Both sons are much interested in the serious things of life than in pink teas.

Add to the rapidly lengthening list of million-dollar gifts by local boys even that by Frank W. Woolworth to a hospital in West Chester, Pa. His own State, Delaware, has received several fortunate millions. It is to improve and increase schools of that State. Although he has vast business responsibilities in connection with the du Pont Powder Interests and is head of General Motors, Mr. du Pont contrives to find time to take a very active part in educational work. He combines executive and business ability. I rather suspect that he is more interested in seeing that children get a good education than in sweating to pile up more millions. He isn't a believer in an eight-hour day for himself.

Cheap money probably has not yet run its course in the investment market.

PRICE TRENDS IN NEW YORK HIGHER

Price trends in active stocks were generally higher in the week-end New York stock market, though sufficient reaction took place to give the market an irregular appearance at times.

Standard industrial and railroad stocks made fractional gains at the opening of the market under the leadership of American Can, U. S. Steel, American Sugar, C. & O. etc.

Coppers and oils were steady, the latter group continuing the rally which was in progress at the close of the previous session.

Statement of Chairman A. C. Bedford of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, who sees a speedy termination of European politics and economic confusion, was a constructive factor in the oil group.

Atlantic Refining had another of its periodic strong days and rose on moderate trading. Niles-Bement-Pond was strong though inactive and Pere Marquette sold in volume always expected.

General Electric, Schulte and other specialty stocks do not appear to have reached the crest of their strength forward movement, both of the stocks named benefiting along to higher price levels today. Willys Overland did sold down 2 points, but rebounded on good buying in the second hour.

Equipments stocks were steady and quiet, while Baldwin Locomotive, Fisk & Rubber sold into new high ground.

Prices Firm in Week-End Transactions in Boston

Prices were firm in week-end transactions on the Boston Stock Exchange. American Telephone, Western Electric and New England Telephone all sold a shade higher.

Shattuck-Arizona Copper Company for quarter ended June 30 shows net of $417,000 after depletion and interest before depletion and deferred development against $76,000 in period, six months and $96,634 in second quarter of 1923.

A few sellers are offering slight concessions on medium grades of cotton for shipment over next two or three months. This is in keeping with the usual custom whenever in July the market becomes dull. Buyers succeed in getting producers of cotton material to negotiate at a discount when a lull in buying develops.

The market may be divided at 12 to 12½ cents for nearby delivery with possibly a premium of 1 point for moderate quantities. European buyers are inclined to limit purchases in the hope of striking a fillip in the buying basis. A waiting condition has developed during the last few days, but of the European conferences coming to an agreement the outstanding business in all directions is expected to show decided expansion.

BONUS BUREAU AIDS VETERANS ON PROBLEMS

American Experts Ready at All Times to Assist in Filing Applications

Hundreds of veterans of the World War are completely satisfied with the service of the American Soldiers' Friend Bureau at No. 100 Summer street, having availed themselves of the adjutant and legal advice and information problems given free of charge by the bureau experts.

Come in, Mr. Veteran, if you are in doubt as to any phase of the bonus regulations, applications, En gge prints, etc.

The office is large and airy, the attaches of the bureau are courteous and polite. If you can't visit us, write us of your problems. Your letter will be promptly answered.

Here are some questions and answers:

MRS. MARY McG., Woburn.

Q.—I should like to know if I am entitled to the bonus. My brother was a veteran and has since died, my father and mother being both dead.

A.—There is no provision in the Bonus Law allowing the sister or brother of a deceased veteran to receive the benefits of the Bonus Law.

C. F., Dorchester.

Q.—I enlisted in the Navy May 4, 1916, and received an honorable discharge February 11, 1920. I re enlisted May 7, 1920, and on November 1, 1920, received a bad conduct discharge. Am I entitled to the bonus and if so how much will I receive? Do I have to wait until the end of twenty years before I can get anything or can I turn in my policy before then and receive some money?

A.—There has been no ruling construing the law in a case like yours, and you are instructed to file an application with the authorities in Washington. If you are entitled to the bonus you will receive a 20-year paid-up insurance certificate with a face value of $1,000. You may at any time after the date of the certificate you will be able to borrow certain amounts printed on the policy.

B. P. M. T., Clinton.

Q.—I enlisted in the navy June 18, 1918, and called to duty on July 2, 1918. Am I entitled to the compensation during the period from June 18, 1918, and July 2, 1918? Also advise me what is the latest date I can figure my compensation to.

A.—You are eligible to receive compensation only for the time from the date you were called into active duty up to July 1, 1919.

H. C., Waverley.

Q.—My brother, a veteran of the World War, now deceased, left a policy of life insurance in the first class that there was no beneficiary named and my mother who was dependent upon him and myself. Does my brother's wife or my mother receive the benefits of the act?

A.—If your brother died leaving no children under 21 years of age, your mother would receive the benefits of the act and not the wife as she has since remarried.

Mrs. A. J. H., Medford.

Q.—Is it possible to name more than one beneficiary for the adjusted compensation?

If your decision is that only one person can be named as beneficiary, is there any form of contract or bond that can be drawn up between the party named as beneficiary and the others that would bind all parties and act to equally distribute the benefits of it?

A.—The bonus law does not provide specifically for the naming of more than one beneficiary in the insurance policy to be issued to you under the act. There seems, however, to be no reason why more than one beneficiary can not be named. Fill out an application designating who ever you see fit as your beneficiaries and allow the bureau here in Washington to pass upon it. If a single beneficiary is named there is no reason why he cannot enter into contract with any other persons as to the benefits of any amount he might receive under the policy. Whether the government officials would consent to become a party to such an arrangement is doubtful.

Mrs. J. A. W., Lynn.

Q.—My husband is ill and in the hospital and probably will be there for a long time and may for the rest of his life. Is it necessary for him to have his finger prints taken?

A.—All applications for the benefits of the bonus law must contain the finger prints of the applicant. The American Legion authorities in Lynn will no doubt be very glad to assist you in having your husband's finger prints taken. You are advised to have your husband apply at once for the benefits of this act so that in the event of his death you will get the maximum amount possible, a great deal of which you would lose if he died before making the application.

F. D., Verdun, P. Q., Canada.

Q.—I am a British subject civilian who served at Quebec, Canada, from May, 1918, to August, 1919, in the U. S. Army Ordnance Department. We were supervised by an American army officer but were no uniform. I was awarded a certificate from the Army Ordnance Department stating my service to the U. S. Government during the World War. Am I entitled to the bonus?

A.—The benefits of the law are only for those who had service in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps. The law specifically says that no civilian, officer or employe of any other branch of the military or naval forces is entitled to receive anything under the act.
